Swirling in the disco whirl

Disco days burn hot toward a disco night

By Rhonda Miller
SUN Staff Writer

It's in the fingertips.
That's where the real skill of Jackie Bergara's dancing comes out.

The sensitivity that he has to his body transfers to his partner by way of the fingertips.

He dips 'em, twists 'em, rock 'em and turn 'em, and when he goes out to a disco club, the ladies ask him to dance.

The girls started, noticing his dancing around the fifth grade.

"Jackie always used to outshine everybody with his dancing," said fifth grade classmate Linda Warren.

Long before Jackie moved to Virginia Beach, he was tearing up the floor at Chesapeake's Great Bridge community center.

He earned his living as a welder for several years, teaching dancing at night.

Dancing for Bergara now hits a high point at the Friday night disco contest at the White Heron in Virginia Beach, but it started back in the days of American Bandstand.

"When I was about five years old, my mother got me into dancing along with the people on television," the 29-year old remembers. "She taught me the Charleston and then other dances, I've been dancing ever since."

He earned his living as a welder for several years teaching dancing at night.

He's a man who dances first and talks later.

He quickly demonstrates a step, then has the student feeling it.

He promises that with his lessons, "people will ask you where you learned to dance."

"Loosen that arm," he'll say with a smile, and instantly, the arm is loose.

On the rock step, he really rocks it, with a motion that looks like a modern dance body wave.

"The lady rests her elbow on the man's elbow."

"You'll very seldom see my heels hit the floor."

"The man has to be taught his lead part."

Bergara gets all the details, and transmits them with a smile.

His students seem to make amazingly rapid progress, and he promises that with his lessons, "people will ask you where you learned to dance."

Does a professional dancer get tired of teaching folks who aren't too sure of where their feet are, or what rhythm is?

"I enjoy getting people to learn," he says, and his students come in with an enthusiasm that bubbles.

The first thing he tries to get people to learn is how to be free.

"Some dance studios teach you to be Continued on p.6

He picks the hits and keeps 'em dancing

"Disco is the rage of the '70's," claims veteran disc jockey Robert V. Mitchell.

"In the 1930's everyone loved jazz. In the 40's it was the big band and in the 50's it was rock and roll. The 60's were years of protest and hard rock. In the 70's people wanted to dance."

Mitchell, who is program director for Virginia Beach's radio station WVAB, has been involved in disco the past six years.

Mitchell, who is known throughout Chesapeake for his disco shows at "Jerry's," "The Virginia Reel" and "The Gallery," has been involved in disco the past six years.

"When people hear of disco they often just think of New York disco."

"It's not something new," he explains. "Disco" is a French word meaning "dancing to records" and there were discotheques in Europe in 1966.

A lot of people have the wrong idea of what disco actually is, he feels.

"When people hear of disco they often think of New York disco," he says. "But it can be the playing of any music for dancing. They even have country music disco now!"

Media exposure is the reason disco is so popular now, he says. "Movies, like 'Saturday Night Fever' and 'Grease' and even an expose on 'Society Minutes' on TV makes everyone aware of disco.

"It's become an $80-100 million a year business.

"I think club operators are finding out that instead of putting in a $200 to $400-a-night band, a man who really knows how to operate a good sound and light show will do as well at one third the cost."

"I also go by my gut reaction to a song. I usually know when a new song will become a hit."

Mitchell predicts disco is here to stay for another five or six years. "But like everything else it can be over done.

"A disco club that's properly managed should last the test of time," he continues. "People go to drink and dance because it's fun. Dancing is a good form of entertainment to watch, and most of all, to participate in."

Mitchell began as a disc jockey while still in high school 12 years ago. He was the first in the area to play records for dancing in clubs, beginning in 1973 with a straight "oldies" line up.

"Spinning records is a part of my livelihood," he explains. "I don't see the secret of a good disc jockey is like that of a good drummer."

"A good disc jockey has a feeling for what songs make people want to dance."

"A drummer keeps a good beat for the band because he is more than likely a good dancer. A good disc jockey has a Continued on p.5

A dip adds excitement to disco dancing. It's a specialty of Virginia Beach dancers Jackie Bergara and Marie Landis.

Veteran disc jockey Robert V. Mitchell predicts disco will be around for another five or six years.

Seafood feast tradition upheld

By Elizabeth George

Michael Hagan and David Boocock have been feeding a lot of people lately.

In fact, in just over one month they will have the opportunity to feed 8,000 to 10,000 more.

The Hagan Boocock Seafood Co. will be catering the Neptune Festival Seafood Feast on Friday, September 15 from 12 noon to 11 p.m. at the Virginia Beach Dome. They will offer a wide variety of fresh seafood at various prices ranging from $1.75 to $18.50.

Coordinators of the Neptune Festival announced earlier this year that the popular feast was to be cancelled for the 1978 activities, but they planned to have it again in the future.

Nellie Bryan, executive director of the Virginia Beach Neptune Festival cited several reasons for the cancellations, however, she added, "The main reason we cancelled was to look into bringing the feast back into the area."

"It is much better to have a complicated ticket sale than a big mess. Anyone with a ticket will be guaranteed getting what they want."

Opposition to the decision made the Neptune Festival staff realize just how important tradition and good food are. In fact, Ms. Bryan was delighted to find the well qualified Hagan Boocock Seafood Co. to do the job.

"It is an established fact that we have a feast," said Bryan.

The Hagan Boocock Seafood Co. was started in 1976 by two brothers-in-law, Michael Hagan and David Boocock, both 29. Before then Hagan had run a lobster boat and Boocock has fished with him.

"We found that there was no one here to handle lobsters at the time so we decided to do it," said Boocock.

The two men set up business on Granby St. in Norfolk where presently seven people work at the company. Four other men work on the lobster boat which Hagan runs. All other seafood is purchased fresh from other fishermen and packers. Since Lobsters are difficult to keep alive, the partners have had to build a holding system and haul in sea water.

It wasn't until the successful Harborfest in Norfolk that a seafood feast in Virginia Beach seemed possible. There the Hagan Boocock Seafood Co. catered approximately 5,000 people in two days. Despite some difficulties, everyone seemed satisfied with the results.

The partners, however, intend to run the Neptune Festival Seafood Feast a "little differently and more efficiently" than the Harborfest.

"This is out of necessity, it won't work any other way," said Hagan.

The main difference in the two activities will be the advanced ticket sales for the Neptune Festival. Eight thousand tickets have been printed up for the one day event which is to take place from 12 noon to 11 p.m. Continued on p.13

It ain't worth it

Ten cents won't buy you much anymore. What's a dime these days?

Well it's plenty when you start adding up all the dimes you put in pay phones and toll gates.

But by far, the worst affront of all is the pay toilet. We had stopped at a local gas station the other day, and I was hoping to run into the ladies' room to "powder my nose."

Discrimination was the first thing that popped to mind when I saw the pay restroom.

The men's room was inside the station and was free. The ladies' room was outside and cost ten cents to get in the door.

Just as I stood there trying to decide if this was worth the price, a woman walked out of the bathroom.

She held the door open for me so I could get inside without being charged, and sarcastically commented, "It isn't worth ten cents."

Truer words were never spoken. The place was a shambles — the worst I've ever seen.

To add insult to injury, there on the back of the door was one of those signs that raves about the station's high sanitation standards and is signed "The Management."

Pam Vandever
SUN News Editor

Wondering how long it had been since this place had seen any sanitation at all, I turned the door knob to leave.

But it was broken and the door could not be opened from the inside. A grim picture entered my mind — I was trapped.

The thought of being cooped up in that place sent me frantically twisting and fumbling with the knob. Luckily, someone waiting in line outside realized my predicament and pushed the door open.

As the next victim entered I sarcastically commented, "It isn't worth ten cents."

Struggling back to the car, I wondered why the place was such a mess. Probably "The Management" didn't want to have to pay a dime to get inside to clean it.

Lawn problems solved

The Virginia Beach Department of Agriculture/VPI Extension Horticulturist advises that many area homeowners are experiencing problems with their lawns this summer. Sod webworms may be the culprit which is causing concern for many homeowners.

Sod webworms are the larvae or caterpillar stage of several species of lepidoptera. The caterpillars build silken tunnels at the ground level where they remain during the day. They come out at night to feed on the blades of grass.

Sod webworms seem to prefer new lawns or those lawns which have received a lot of care. Damage first appears as small brown areas in the grass; the turf often has a ragged appearance.

Spraying the lawn in the evening with diazinon or carbaryl (Sevin) should help control the sod webworm. Do not mow grass for at least one day after spraying.

Water conservation ordinance goes into effect in September

The Virginia Beach city council recently approved a Water Conservation Ordinance. This ordinance, which is effective as of September 1, will require water-saving devices to be installed in all new construction and require water recycling systems for all car washes in Virginia Beach. The ordinance is divided into four sections and is summarized as follows:

1. Flow rates and water usage rates will be restricted in toilets, urinals, shower heads, and sink faucets. Toilets will be required to use no more than 3 1/4 gallons of water per flush; urinals no more than 3 gallons per flush; shower heads no more than 3 gallons per minute; and, sink faucets no more than 4 gallons per minute.

2. Faucets of lavatories located in public restrooms must be of the metering or self-closing type. Also, no urinal or water closet can operate on a continuous flow basis.

3. All car washes must be equipped with an approved water recycling system. Those currently in existence must be retrofitted with an approved system within one year.

4. All other continuous flow devices of 5 gallons per minute or more must have an approved water recycling system.

For more specific information regarding this ordinance contact the Virginia Beach Department of Permits and Inspections at 427-4211.

Public hearing set on water supply problem

Senator J. Lewis Rawls has announced that the State Water Study Commission will hold a public hearing at 7:30 p.m., Monday, August 7, at the Virginia Beach city council chambers at the Municipal Center at Virginia Beach for the purpose of receiving comments on water supply and allocation problems in Southeastern Virginia.

The State Water Study Commission was created in 1977 pursuant to House Joint Resolution 236 to recommend to the General Assembly ways to address water supply and allocation problems, particularly those of Northern and Southeastern Virginia. The drought of the summer of 1977 showed, however, that critical present and potential water shortages exist and are not confined to any one geographical area of the state.

The 1978 General Assembly's Senate Joint Resolution 1 continued the State Water Study Commission and directed that the commission thoroughly analyze water supply and allocation problems of the entire state and make such recommendations to the General Assembly as it deems necessary and desirable.

The study commission is composed of Senator J. Lewis Rawls of Suffolk, chairman; Senator Charles J. Colgan of Manassas; Senator Wiley F. Mitchell of Alexandria; Delegate J. Paul Council of Franklin; Delegate Gerald L. Bailes of Richmond; Delegate Glenn B. McClannan of Virginia Beach; Delegate Gary R. Myers of Alexandria; Delegate Lewis W. Parker of South Hill; and citizen representatives Robert R. Peters of Norfolk; Louis L. Guy of Fairfax; James H. Dillard of Fairfax; George W. Williams of Charlottesville; and George M. Cornell, a member of the State Water Control Board, who serves as an ex-officio member of the commission.

The commission has already held hearings in Wise, Roanoke, Harrisonburg, Fredericksburg, Accomac and Danville. A hearing in Northern Virginia is also planned for September.

Conservation plants used to control erosion and improve environment

"Plant materials centers of the Soil Conservation Service (SCS) working with other federal and state agencies are releasing a record number of conservation plants this year," said D.D. Adams, Dist. Conservationist.

In just the first 5 months of 1978, the centers released 15 varieties for commercial production, as compared to a total of 7 varieties released in 1977.

Plants are to release even more before the end of the year.

The new conservation plants will be available to help control erosion and sedimentation.

"They will play an important role in improving the quality of our environment," stated Adams.

Some of the 1978 plants released include: "Alamo" switchgrass to control shoreline erosion and protect flood control structures.

"King-Red" Russian olive and "Flame" Amur maple for shelterbelts and windbreak plantings, landscaping, and wildlife food and cover.

Three varieties of wildflowers to reestablish prairies and to beautify and protect roadsides and recreation areas.

"Barranco" desertwillow for windbreaks and screens.

"The new releases indicate how SCS's plant materials program is responding to the needs of the 1970's. We no longer search exclusively for conservation plants to be used on the farm, although these are still a major part of our work. Now we have broadened our scope, and we are evaluating environmental improvement plants for a wide range of uses," said Adams.

"For example, we have stepped up the search for plants that will help reclaim mined land, protect sand dunes and control shore erosion, stabilize construction sites and other critical areas, and beautify the landscape as they work. We are looking for plants that will help stabilize waste disposal areas, provide food and cover for wildlife, tolerate pollution and toxic soil conditions, and retard the spread of fire."

SCS has a publication, "Conservation Plants for the Northeast," (PA-1154) which describes 60 plants that are useful on disturbed areas; for stabilizing coastal dunes or sandy inland areas; for providing wildlife food and cover; for growing hedges, windbreaks, and screens.

If you need assistance in selecting plant materials for conservation uses or environmental improvement, contact SCS personnel at 300 Cedar Road Chesapeake, Va. 247-7171.

You can ask for a copy of "Conservation Plants for the Northeast," an appointment to discuss your particular conservation needs, or both.

Post office offers film mailing suggestions

Camera buffs are urged to properly prepare film being sent through the mail for processing to help preserve those precious summer photographic memories.

Each year, thousands of film packages end up in dead letter offices throughout the country because of careless wrapping and addressing, often resulting in a missing pictorial record of vacation trips.

The following tips will help ensure safer handling of film while in the mail stream.

Place film cartridges in sturdy envelopes. When possible, use the envelopes usually supplied by film processing companies.

Make sure that the processor's mailing address as well as a return address are written legible on the outside envelope. Use ZIP Codes.

As an extra precaution, tape your name and address to the film roll or cartridge before inserting it in the envelope. Your name and address should be written also on the back of any photographs being sent in for re-touching, copying or other purposes.

SUN deadlines

News deadline for the Virginia Beach Sun is 5 p.m. Friday for the following Wednesday's edition.

Articles must be legible, preferably typewritten, double-spaced on standard sized paper.

Pictures must be sharp, clear and accompanied by complete information. (All persons in pictures must be identified.)

There is no charge for news articles or pictures.

Pictures cannot be returned unless special arrangements are made.

Nose powdering can be traumatic

Bathroom stories are always fresh.

My favorite memory is called, "Close Call in Nebraska."

The cross country drive had driven me to dreamland by the time the America's breadbasket came along.

Pit stops had lost their glamor by that time, so when the guys in the front seat decided to check out the john scene in the Midwest, my first thought was to snooze right through it.

Never having visited a ladies room in Nebraska before, the urge finally hit and I crawled out of the back seat and ventured forth to a new frontier.

No major surprises were in store for me in the ladies. The real surprise was on my exit, when I realized that my traveling companions had vanished.

Panic is the same in Nebraska as it is in Tidewater, but it didn't get a chance to get a hold on me.

Rhonda Miller
SUN Staff Writer

Somewhere down the off ramp the guys had decided to consult me for some reason, and noticed a limp blanket in the back seat.

They threw it into reverse and rescued me from an uncertain future in a Nebraska rest stop.

Thank goodness. Johns are a great place to visit, but I wouldn't want to live there.

Social Security Administration

Your Number's Up

By Harvey J. Ridinger
Field Representative

Domestic Employment Covered

Men and women who work in someone else's home as a maid, cook, yardman, butler, or in similar jobs, should make sure that their earnings are being correctly reported for social security.

Earnings of people in domestic employment are covered for social security purposes when they total $50 cash or more in a calendar quarter. Once the $50 test is met, all of the person's earnings are covered and should be reported.

Employees should make sure their employer deducts the social security tax and makes the proper reports to the Internal Revenue Service. Employer's who need more information on how to report wages for their domestic employees should obtain a free brochure, "Social Security and Your Household Employee," from any social security office.

A person's present and future social security protection depends on his or her covered earnings being correctly reported. The right to, and the amount of, benefits is directly related to properly reported earnings.

Social security benefits play an important part in maintaining family income when a worker retires, becomes disabled, or dies. If not all earnings are reported, benefits will be lower than they should, or, possibly not payable at all.

It's a good idea for people to check their social security records every 3 years or so. This is especially true if they change jobs often or have several employers.

People who want to check their record can get a free postcard form (Form-7004) at any social security office. All they have to do is fill out the card and mail it. In return they will get a statement of the earnings reported to their social security number.

Brickell appointed to advisory panel

Dr. E. E. Brickell, Superintendent of Virginia Beach Public Schools, has been appointed as a member of the advisory panel to the American Association of School Administrators National Center for the Improvement of Learning (AASA-NCIL). The national organization deals primarily with the thrust of curriculum and instruction, and its objective is to improve the general practice in management of both.

During his one-year term Dr. Brickell is expected to attend about five meetings of the AASA-NCIL advisory panel.

Hospital expands visiting

Expanded visiting hours are now being enjoyed by patients at General Hospital of Virginia Beach, their friends and families.

Patients in both private and semi-private rooms in medical and surgical areas may now receive visitors from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., and 7 to 8:30 p.m. The new schedule is designed to encourage visiting throughout the day, so that patients will not become overfired from many visitors within a short period.

Exceptions to the new hours are the maternity area, where visiting hours will remain 2-4 p.m. and 7 to 8:30 p.m.; and the intensive and coronary care units. Only members of the patient's immediate family may visit in these two special care areas, and they may ask the nurses or information desk for a schedule.

The limit of two visitors per patient at one time is still in effect, and visitors should continue to obtain passes at the information desk.

The hospital and its medical staff have also passed a new regulation prohibiting smoking by visitors in patient care areas. Visitors are asked to return to the lobbies to smoke, even if the patient they are visiting is a smoker.

City employee honored at retirement

Lee Roy Dixon Sr., recently retired superintendent of automotive services for the city of Virginia Beach, has been admitted to a lifetime membership in the exclusive "Maintenance Masters Club of the National Safety Council."

Membership is awarded for outstanding performance in the field of motor safety maintenance. Dixon was presented his plaque by city manager George L. Hanbury at ceremonies held at the Virginia Beach Civic Center during his retirement dinner.

Membership in this international honor society is limited to those individuals in the field of motor vehicle maintenance who have demonstrated their expertise and safety consciousness over many years in at least four of the following areas: savings in maintenance costs, shop safety, work improvement, cooperation, training and record keeping.

Dixon has been employed with the city of Virginia Beach for 18 years. He became superintendent of automotive services on July 1, 1968 and served in this position until his retirement on June 30.

Dixon's name and organization have been entered on a permanent roll of honor at the National Safety Council headquarters in Chicago.

Holy Spirit parish plans ceremonies

Holy Spirit parish will hold ground breaking ceremonies at 3 p.m. August 6 on their property at Lynnhaven Parkway and Primrose Lane in Green Run.

Founded in 1975 in response to overcrowding at neighboring Catholic churches, Holy Spirit parish numbers 500 families in the Windsor Woods, Plaza, and Green Run areas of Virginia Beach.

With much construction still taking place, the parish expects to number 800 families by 1980.

The founding pastor, Father William H. Carr, is presently assisted by Sister Maureen Milnamow and Sister Patricia Cornell. Frederick E. Stemple is chairman of the Parish Council. By cooperating with various city social services agencies as well as neighboring churches, Holy Spirit parish provides an outreach which affects the community. Members of the parish are involved with Meals on Wheels, nursing homes and other volunteer projects.

Holy Spirit's new church building is envisioned as being of service to the larger community as well as the church community. With spacious commons, kitchen, meeting rooms and nursery, as well as the worship area which will accommodate 550 persons, the parish hopes to offer its building to various civic and social groups in the area.

Mental health unit earns commendation

The Virginia Beach Mental Health and Mental Retardation Services Board's Comprehensive Mental Health Services (CMHS) program has received a commendation from the National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH). This NIMH commendation was for the mental health program's responsiveness in the area of emergency/crisis services.

The commendation from NIMH, the federal government agency responsible for monitoring community mental health programs, resulted from a recent unannounced, random survey of mental health emergency programs across the United States.

The NIMH staff in Washington conducted a survey on a Sunday afternoon of 40 community mental health programs to test the availability of each program's telephone emergency service.

The Virginia Beach Mental Health program through a combination of its own staff and a contractual agreement with the Regional Crisis Center program, provides 24-hour mental health emergency coverage to Virginia Beach residents.

NIMH complimented the Virginia Beach program for successfully meeting the criteria of providing rapid access to a treatment counselor to respond to mental health emergencies.

This emergency/crisis service component of the Virginia Beach CMHS program is one facet of the city's overall mental health system. In addition to emergency/crisis services, the Virginia Beach CMHS offers outpatient counseling, children's services, an adult day treatment program, an aftercare medication clinic program and consultation and education services.

Residents of Virginia Beach with a mental health emergency during weekdays until 9 p.m. should contact the CMHS emergency unit at 490-0583. After 9 p.m., weekends and holidays, mental health crisis calls should be directed to the Crisis Center at 399-6393.

Merritts named production officer

ECDR Mike Merritts recently became the production officer at the Naval Air Rework Facility (NARF), Norfolk.

LCDR Merritts is a familiar face at NARF. He reported as engines/ground support equipment project officer in 1976. In 1977 he was assigned as F-14 engines project officer.

Before coming to NARF, he was project director for advanced school signal processor at the Naval Air Development Center, Warminster, Pennsylvania.

LCDR Merritts was born in Lock Haven, Pennsylvania. He began his naval career in 1959, graduating from the Naval Academy in 1964. A year later he was designed a naval aviator.

He flew the P2 aircraft in VP-24 NAS, Norfolk, and then the P3 at Patuxent River, Maryland.

Next came Naval Post Graduate School where he was awarded the masters and aeronautical engineers degrees in aeronautical engineering (Avionics). During this time he was designated an aeronautical engineering duty officer.

He is married to the former Brenda Womack of Virginia Beach. He and his wife live in the Kempsville area.

Don't let summer get to your air conditioner

If you're like most of us, the first time you test your air conditioner for the summer was the day it got hot. What happens if it didn't work, you probably (1) called for a service technician, (2) went out to buy a new one, or (3) suffered.

Service technicians, of course, are very busy because of all the other calls they get this time of year. And the stores are often jammed.

Even if your air conditioner did work, it might work a lot more efficiently with a little help from you.

The following simple checklist can help you get the most from your air conditioner this summer.

Trim bushes, shrubs. Free air circulation around the air conditioner is essential to good, efficient performance.

Check filter. Just as bushes can restrict air flow on the outside, a dirty filter can restrict it on the inside. Be sure to clean the filter and check it about once a month for the entire cooling season.

Check coils, inside and out. Dirt accumulation on the coils tends to reduce efficiency. Such accumulation is most likely to occur on the outside coils. If cleaning is indicated, you'll probably need the help of a professional who can steam clean the coils.

Check the power cord. It's just plain common sense to check the power cord for peeling or cracked insulation.

However, if you doubt that the air conditioner will make it through the summer due to old age, start shopping for a new one soon. If you do decide to replace your old air conditioner with a new one, consider one of a bit smaller capacity than the old unit. Not only could it help keep down the initial purchase price, a smaller unit likely would cost less to operate and may do a better comfort job than a unit that is somewhat oversized.

An air conditioner does two things to make a room cool and comfortable. It cools and it dehumidifies. A unit too large for a particular room will cool the room quickly, then the compressor will cycle off. Since dehumidification occurs only while the compressor is operating, an oversized unit may not dehumidify sufficiently.

A slightly undersized unit, on the other hand, will operate the compressor more of the time, and thereby control humidity more effectively. In the past, the capacity of many room air conditioners was determined by estimating the size of the area to be cooled, and then adding a bit for good measure. The result is, that many units in service today are larger than necessary.

Added to that is the recent trend to insulation and weather stripping, brought on by the increasing cost of heating. The same insulation that helps keep a house warm in the winter will help keep it cool in the summer; therefore, reducing the load on the air conditioner.

Horticulture field day scheduled

The Tidewater Horticulture Field Day will be held on Wednesday, August 9. Sponsored by the Virginia Beach Department of Agriculture/VPI Extension Services in cooperation with the Virginia Truck & Ornamentals Research Station, this annual event will be held at the Research Station on Diamond Springs Road from 10 a.m.-4 p.m.

In addition to the hundreds of annual flowers, trees, shrubs, and vegetables being grown in the gardens, the public will have the opportunity to meet with and discuss plant problems with area horticulturists. Extension home economists will also be available to assist with food preservation questions.

For additional information, contact the Virginia Beach Department of Agriculture/VPI Extension Services at 427-4611.

Fishing activity slow

Game Warden R.R. Townsend reports the city lakes around Suffolk and Norfolk continue to offer some good activity for sunfish, but poor still is the word for other species there, and action is fair for sunfish, poor for other species in Back Bay and Northwest River. Waters: medium, clear, stable.

Sgt. J.A. McCleary reports there was practically no fishing activity at all last week due to the extreme heat in either the Blackwater River (Medium-high, stable and dingy) or the medium-high, rising and very muddy Nottoway River. No action was reported at all due to the heat on the medium-stable and clear Refuge and Airfield ponds.

The beat makes you want to do it

By Rhonda Miller
SUN Staff Writer

Just three lessons into disco dancing, Joy Allred really rocks it.
"I saw it on T.V. and I had to be able to do it," she smiles after working up a heat on the floor at the Disco Dance Studio owned by Jackie Bergara and Marie Landis of Virginia Beach.

A lady who gets into nearly every dance that America can handle, handles the disco scene like a pro.
"The beat just makes you want to do it," she says to explain why she learned it so fast.
Where in the body does a person feel the disco beat?
"You feel it everywhere," she says with a twinkle.
Her husband, Jack, who is also moving right along with his lessons, is getting his lead part down to a fine art, she says.

That's one reason she really likes disco.
"The partners have to know what the other one is doing."

Joy Allred has only been taking lessons for three weeks, but she's a fast learner when Jackie Bergara of Virginia Beach is the teacher.

Smiles come fast, once the beat gets to the dancers.

Learning style adds interest to disco.

Under, and it's easy, when the fingertips give the message.

Those two left feet stories are a waste of words.

Philippine folk dancing isn't quite disco.
Jamie Vihar enjoys both forms of the art of dance. As a member of the Philippine Folk Dance Company of Manila, he toured Europe and Asia, training for at least an hour each day.
Vihar now assists people in their travels at Asian Travel on Independence Blvd., and keeps up with his dancing.
The Philippine dance company was well received at a recent performance at the Virginia Beach Dome.
Vihar has been well-received on the disco floors of Virginia Beach, where he admits that the ladies do ask him to dance.
It's all part of the pleasure of disco.

Dear Dr. Disco...

Editor's Note: Dr. Melvin Disco earned his Ph.D. in Disco Theory at Travolta University in Brooklyn. He is the author of many articles on disco dancing and has done extensive research on the physiological and emotional effects of disco music on rats. He presently resides in Virginia Beach where he is working on a new book entitled "The Socio-Economic Impact of Disco Dancing in Virginia Beach."

Questions for Dr. Disco should be addressed to: Virginia Beach SUN, 138 Rosemont Road, Virginia Beach, Va. 23456.

Dear Dr. Disco,

It all started with Saturday Night Fever! I drug my boyfriend by his shoulder length hair to the cinema to see Travolta get down. Through the whole picture I kept whinnying to Sidney...

"Sidney why can't you look like that, instead of something that you find in a mop closet?"

"Sidney why can't you dance like that? Standing in one spot swinging your hair around isn't what I consider dancing."

"Sidney how come you never listen to disco music? Johnny Pay Check isn't disco, Sidney!"

"Sidney, Sidney, Sidney..."

Well one week after I drug poor Sidney to the theatre I didn't hear from him. I thought it had all ended because of my nagging and putting him down. Well don't you know just a few days later I found Sidney on my door step dressed to the max in his Travolta suit and even had his hair cut, SHORT.

However this is my problem...We saw the movie

April 14 and ever since Sidney has become obsessed with dancing EVERY night, seven days a week. Dr. Disco, my feet can't take it much longer, their threatening a walk out now if I stuff them in a pair of heels one more night and allow strangers to step all over them. I love Sidney too much to tell him to go jump in a pond because my feet are pooped. Help!

Signed,

Too tired to tap another toe

Dear Too tired to tap,

* Take him to see "Heaven Can Wait," and nag about Warren Beatty.

Dear Dr. Disco,

My grandmother came up for a visit from Miami and wanted to go disco dancing.

We took her out to Bojangles and she danced half of the young men off the floor.

I'm glad that she enjoyed herself, but I'm getting tired of answering the telephone for her and making excuses to all those guys.

How can I tell them politely that Granny just wanted a dance and nothing more?

Dear Amazed,

Tell them that Granny's gone to Miami to pick up a new set of false teeth, but that every one of yours is an original. Then invite them over to practice dancing.

Men pose in disco mirror

By Pam Vandever
SUN News Editor

How is the disco craze affecting what men wear?
"People are dressing up a lot more now," says David Chaney of Dan Ryan's mens' store at Hilltop.
"You can't wear jeans to disco anymore. At some places you have to wear a coat and tie."

He says their store carries a lot of imported merchandise directed toward the young man who goes to discotheques.

"We have a lot of demand for these clothes," he comments. "Men are trying to outdo each other in their dressing."

"People are starting to sit home in front of the mirror and pose and dance before hitting the clubs, just like they used to do in the '60's."

Chaney concludes, "Men's taste and buying habits are very much like women's now -- if not worse."

What does a guy wear to go disco dancing? David Chaney models one possibility from Dan Ryan's collection.

America stopped watching television

Ain't no hangin' around the T.V. tube for Shelley Smith. She's out doing intricate versions of the swing or cha cha whenever she gets a chance.

"America got tired of sitting around watching television," she figures, and she's glad to see it.

"People in this country are getting more athletic, that's why disco dancing hit so big."

Disco experience holds surprises

By Julia Geiger

"Do you hustle?"

"How dare you," the girl wailed as she let the palm of her hand graze across the smooth clean shaven face.

It was obvious that this was the girl's first experience with a disco.

I felt rather sorry for her, remembering my first experience. I'm the sort of person who likes to keep abreast of things, and since disco's are the latest, I found myself caught in the whirlwind.

The first time I went to a disco was in Washington, D.C. The music was flowing like blood thru veins. Having a few schnapps under my belt I was ready for whatever lurked under the dance spots.

A face appeared from behind a drained beer glass, which was still positioned at the mouth. "Wanna dance?"

I accepted and we headed for the plexiglass platform. I had no sooner gotten my feet planted when I was thrust into a spin that I felt sure would leave a hole beneath my heel. I could have passed for the Ajax white tornado had I been in someone's kitchen at the time. This guy was obsessed with keeping me in a spin while he stayed busy with his unattended cigarette, letting the smoke drift up his nostrils.

Everytime I thought I had him in focus he would start blending in with two hundred other heads. Finally, I broke the hold and spun into a table leaving overturned brandy sniffers, stained table cloth and two screaming women leaping from their chairs.

I found another partner, one who had just walked in. His specialty was trickery with the arms. Over, under, behind, around, left, right, over, under... By the end of the little display, we could have passed for someone's discarded Christmas bow from a mutilated package.

There seemed to be more to this than anticipated. I enrolled in a dance class teaching the latest steps in disco. This first lesson lasted only five minutes due to the fact my instructor spent three minutes out of the five face down on the waxed floor. His suggestion was for me to give up dancing and go into wrestling.

I tried three different studios and all said the same thing, my feet were made for wearing socks and nothing more.

But nevertheless I'm the one who doesn't give up as easily as my partners. I pursued dancing in the discos and to this day I'm still working to pay off my chiropractor.

I still haven't figured out why they call it disco, the correct spelling should be disc-Go.

Teaching rhythm is a disco challenge

By RHONDA MILLER
SUN Staff Writer

About twice a week, Debbie Benson gets the fever. She'll slip in to a flow-y, flower-y dress and head out for a disco club.

She's a Virginia Beach dancer whose favorite fever spot is the White Heron.

Teaching disco dancing is a pleasure for her cause she gets to do what she likes best.

"Teaching rhythm is the hardest thing," she's found, after about a year of teaching.

Luckily, most people get right into the disco rhythm simply through body language.

She's taken a few lessons herself, but picks up most of her new steps from watching other people dance.

Carried away with the disco fever herself, Ms. Benson figures most people first caught it from the movie "Saturday Night Fever."

The fever's got to some of her old friends who just seem to pop up from time to time, asking her to show 'em how it's done.

Disco's day has come, and she's moving with it.

She still sells pre-cut homes, but she's also part owner of the Disco Dance Studio. "People don't usually give you the floor," he says. The competition is getting stiff in local disco clubs, but to Jackie, it's all in good fun. With his partner, Marie Landis, though, it's happened more than once. "Nobody wants to be shown up," he says, and some men won't ask a lady to dance if he thinks he's not a good enough dancer. The same goes for Jackie Bergara really rocks it. On Friday or Saturday night at the club, or on Wednesday afternoon at his Disco Dance Studio in Chesapeake,

Isolation is no drawback for Beach Navy couple in Cuba

By Jerry Babb

Life in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, offers most summer pleasures Paul Orr of Virginia Beach enjoyed while living at home.

But swimming, fishing, diving and shell collecting are year-round pleasures for him these days.

Orr, the 22-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Willard P. Orr of 1537 Indian River Rd., Virginia Beach, is on a two-year assignment with the Navy at Guantanamo Bay...the only U.S. military base on Communist soil.

"It's a small command...beautiful climate with a large selection of off-duty activities," noted Orr, a hospital corpsman second class who has served here since last March. "Families are able to save a great deal of money here because there's so little to spend it on."

His wife, the former Karen Andrews of Perkins, Pa., is also a hospital corpsman second class serving at the base hospital in Guantanamo Bay. He is the senior corpsman assigned to work in the hospital wards, and she works in the facility's patient affairs office.

The United States leased the Guantanamo Bay site - 45 square miles of property enclosed by water, 17 miles of fence and an active land minefield - from Cuba in 1903. In 1934, the treaty was renegotiated giving the U.S. a perpetual lease which can only be voided by abandoning the area, or my mutual agreement between the U.S. and Cuban governments.

Although small and compact in its own right, this naval base on the shores of the Caribbean Sea serves as headquarters for men and women engaged in a massive training program designed to hone the skills of crewmen serving aboard warships of the U.S. Atlantic Fleet.

Nearly 100 ships a year complete the rugged training program under the watchful eyes of Navy Fleet Training Group instructors from Guantanamo Bay. Their training operations are conducted in a 14,000-square-mile ocean area south of here and include such shipboard functions as navigation, gunnery, damage control and general seamanship.

"My wife and I were able to get orders for a twenty-four month tour here," explained Navyman Orr, a 1974 graduate of Norview High School, Norfolk. "After a tour of duty aboard ship, I was certainly looking forward to duty here with my wife."

He previously served with Fighter Squadron 32 at the Oceana Naval Air Station, a unit that operated from the aircraft carrier USS John F. Kennedy.

Duty in this community of some 6,200 military and civilians - including wives and children - does have its faults, according to Petty Officer Orr who has served with the sea service since July, 1974.

"Small numbers of staff cause us some long working hours here at the hospital, and it's the same at some of the other base commands," he said.

While Guantanamo Bay may not offer every day-to-day necessity or luxury of life the Orrs enjoyed while living back in the United States, they're not living in total isolation.

Guantanamo is self-supporting and has been since 1964 when the Castro government cut off the water and electricity supplied by Cuba. A seawater conversion plant, capable of producing 2.3 million gallons of fresh water daily, also provides 23,000 kilowatts of electrical power.

The base has a modern, fully-equipped hospital, dental services, a color television station, AM and FM radio stations, a bowling center, several free movies daily, restaurants, one commissary (supermarket) and two base exchanges (retail stores).

For the more active individuals, there's year-round horseback riding, golf, swimming, tennis, football, baseball, basketball and fishing.

"I ride my ten-speed bike, do some snorkeling, collect shells and do some photography" said Orr of his off-duty hours which must be spent within the confines of the base. People serving there are not permitted to cross into Communist Cuba.

Rest and relaxation (R&R) flights are available to base residents who might like to spend a weekend in Jamaica, Puerto Rico or Haiti. Passengers are charged a nominal fee for these flights to cover fuel and maintenance expenses for the aircraft.

"I haven't taken an R & R trip yet," he concluded.

"I would like to visit Jamaica and Puerto Rico to do some sightseeing."

Paul and Karen Orr get in some diving time during their off-duty hours in Cuba.

The urge to preserve bodies from the ravages of death—using some form of mummification—has been going strong since about 2500 B.C. From the ancient rulers of Egypt to Lenin and Mao Tse-tung, various embalming substances have been used, including honey, brandy, myrrh and aloe.

Flabbergasted with results of classified

Brenda Sharp of Chesapeake hoped to get a little business when she advertised sewing and alterations in the Chesapeake POST/Virginia Beach SUN. She never expected to be swamped with calls.

"I have been very pleased with the results. I've received 12-14 calls which have more than made up for the cost of advertising. The calls have been for a variety of work and have been from Virginia Beach and Norfolk as well as Chesapeake.

"I am flabbergasted with the results of the ad."

Why does she think her advertisement was such a success?

"Because its a family thing. Most people who want sewing done are families-people who read the paper are families and they want to read and enjoy your papers."

For quick results, call 487-3477.

No-wax brings response

"We have been getting about the same results with your papers as we are using," said Linda Mosher of Virginia Beach. "We are very pleased with the prices we are paying you for your ads."

Several months ago, her husband, Douglas Mosher, began advertising no-wax vinyl flooring in the Chesapeake POST/Virginia Beach SUN.

"The ad is more eye-catching in your paper-it stands out more. A weekly paper is read more thoroughly than a daily paper."

For quick results, call 487-3477.

Seafood feast

Ticket sales end September 8 and by then the Seafood Co. will know how much food will be needed.

"It is much better to have a complicated ticket sale than a big mess," said Boocock. "Anyone with a ticket will be guaranteed getting what they want."

According to Boocock, the Dome is an ideal location for the feast. The kitchens will be available for use and there will be shelter in case of bad weather. Although plans are not yet definite, there will probably be one row of tables for each item. About 50 people will work at the feast whereas approximately 26 worked at the Harborfest.

"There will be some lines," said Boocock, "but they will move quickly."

"I don't have any qualms about it. If I didn't think we could do it I wouldn't try to bite it off."

"We work hard at it and we like a challenge and we like to do a good job at it. Its a business proposition."

Another advantage to this year's feast is the variety of the menu and the prices.

"There are enough items on the menu at an affordable price so the whole family can come," said Bryan.

"I'm real enthused about it," she said. "These are conscientious young men anxious to do a good job. What I think is going to contribute to the success of the feast is that Hagan and Boocock are just as excited at supplying the seafood as we are at having the feast back in the festival."

Tickets will be mailed on receipt of your check. Tickets can be purchased at the Virginia Beach Neptune Festival Office, Chamber of Commerce, and Virginia Beach Federal Savings & Loan (all branches).

Make your check payable to Virginia Beach Neptune Festival, Box 390, Virginia Beach, Va. 23458. Phone 490-3129.

The versatile peanut turns up in soup, penicillin, axle grease, metal polish and innumerable other products. Sen. Barry Goldwater once used it instead of shaving cream. The latest development is a high-pressure, high-temperature method for converting the peanut's carbon content into industrial diamonds.

Beach briefs

First night meeting set

Virginia Beach city council's first night meeting under an ordinance approved Monday afternoon will be held Aug. 28 at 5:30 p.m. The period from 5:30 to 7 p.m. has been set aside for the informal and executive sessions with the formal session beginning at 7 p.m.

Subsequent night meetings will be held on the fourth Monday of every month except for holidays and the fourth Monday of July when council does not meet.

Other meetings will be held at 1 p.m. on the first, second and third Mondays.

Councilman George R. Ferrell cast the only vote against the night meetings because he objected to requiring the staff to work nights without compensation.

Union conflict stops work

The work stoppage at the Virginia Beach Arts and Conference Center Monday morning was the result of a union conflict, city manager George L. Hanbury told city council Monday afternoon. He said local union members objected to the hiring of union members from Richard by Basic Construction Company.

Water fee study requested

City Manager George L. Hanbury told council Monday afternoon that he has asked Aubrey Watts, utilities director, to study water and sewer line fees.

Hanbury said that residential fees are much lower than hotel, motel and commercial fees.

Reappointments announced

Richard H. Kline and George A. Woody Jr., were reappointed to the Virginia Beach Development Authority for four-year terms.

Virginia Beach city council made the reappointments Monday afternoon when five members were also appointed to the Social Services Advisory Board for one year. They are Marion Bright, Mrs. Louise Allen, C. W. Cashman, Millson W. Derring and John L. Perry.

Council meeting cancelled

Virginia Beach city council has cancelled its Sept. 18 meeting to permit council members to attend the Virginia Municipal League meeting at the Omni in Norfolk Sept. 17-19.

Sweeping her off her feet

Even if the slippers don't quite fit, a handsome prince is bound to come sweep this little princess off her feet. Busily occupied with her mother's shoes is 21-month-old Denn Pocan, daughter of Steve and Debbie Pocan of Virginia Beach. Inside this week the SUN takes a close look at the unusual world of feet. ### Fair share sought

Beach concerned in battle for funds

By Lee Cahill
SUN Public Affairs Writer

In past years, the State Water Control Board (SWCB) has allocated a disproportionate share of sanitation funds to Northern Virginia, and Col. James Borberg, acting director of the Hampton Roads Sanitation District (HRSD), thinks Tidewater should go after its fair share.

He told Virginia Beach city council Monday afternoon that from 1971 to 1977 $247.7 million was allocated to Northern Virginia compared to $93.4 million for Tidewater. Projected spending for Northern Virginia is $126.5 for a total of $374.2 through fiscal 1987 and $222.5 for Tidewater for a total of $313.9 million.

Other allocations through fiscal 1977 include West Central $74.6 million; Southwest, $27.1 million; Valley, $52.1 million and Piedmont, $84.4 million.

"Not a single senator or delegate from this area was fighting for us."

Borberg said Tidewater's lack of representation on the SWCB has something to do with the lopsided allocations. In recent years, Tidewater managed to place two representatives on the eight-member board, mostly, Councilman Clarence A. Holland said, through the efforts of the Virginia Beach council.

One of them, former Norfolk Mayor Roy B. Martin, has since resigned, "from frustration" Holland said, and the other member is George Cornell of Suffolk. Martin was replaced with someone from the western part of the state.

Councilman Donald S. Merrick said that when Northern Virginia had a request for funds before the board, 45 people testified for Northern Virginia including state senators and delegates.

"Not a single senator or delegate from this area was fighting for us," he said.

The next public hearing on allocations is scheduled for September 26 in Virginia Beach and the Virginia Beach council plans to have as many Tidewater representatives at the meeting as possible.

In the meantime, council Monday afternoon adopted a resolution requesting the SWCB to approve the HRSD request for total funding for fiscal years 1978, 1979 and 1980 to complete the 36-million gallon per day Atlantic Treatment Plant. The decision on whether to make the plant capacity 36 million gallons or 27 million gallons will be made Friday (Aug. 11).

The plant, Borberg said, is needed by January 1983 or earlier, but as funded by the SWCB will not be completed until January, 1984.

No funds have been approved by the SWCB for the Nansemond Plant which is needed by January 1983, the Chesapeake-Elizabeth upgrading, needed by July 1983 or the Lambert's Point Plant phase II, needed by July Continued on page 13.

Soul radiates through shoe repairing

By Rhonda J. Miller
SUN Staff Writer

Funeral work and shoe repairing. Psychologically, they're the same, says Buddy Jordan.

People, that's the key. Jordan rises from his sewing machine at Fant's Shoe Repair at Princess Anne Plaza retrieves a purse.

"Nice leather," he smiles to the lady, and he's touched her own appreciation of the rich leather handbag.

"I fixed everything on it that I could fix. It would be a shame to do only part of it."

She's satisfied, asks for polishing recommendations, then gives with a wish for a good weekend.

It's not the usual business encounter.

He advises that anybody who buys shoes (and who doesn't) should buy leather because it breathes.

"I'll just try on some of these shoes," says a man whose attention is caught by a pair on the shelf.

"Those are the worst ones in the shop," says Jordan, as he scans the room for a better pair.

"I'd rather tell him the truth than let him have a pair of shoes that he won't enjoy," Jordan says, as if he'd never heard of the "hard sell."

After 15 years in the funeral business, the satisfaction of helping people diminished as the job turned into a 24-hour-a-day routine.

Jordan changed perspective on helping people and discovered that "shoes are a challenge."

"Nothing is alike," he smiles, studying a rip in a sole as if to perceive its identity.

"Nothing is alike," he smiles, studying the rip in a sole as if to perceive its identity.

"If a dog chews up a shoe, it's a challenge to put it back together."

Leatherwork was a hobby when Jordan had horses, and taking care of the tack is still one of his favorite jobs.

Boots line some of the shelves at Fant's and Jordan's own feet below the straw cowboy hat, denim jacket, and jeans, are protected by scuffed, pointed cowboy boots.

Leather is his specialty, and he advises that anybody who buys shoes, (and who doesn't?), should buy leather because it breathes.

Buddy Jordan finds every shoe a new challenge.

Barefoot is best

Buying shoes can be a problem. Consider the person who says he has two left feet. Now he's got a job on his hands (feet?) when it comes to finding shoes.

Perhaps more common is the person blessed with one foot that's a size larger than the other. He's either got to buy the same pair of shoes in two different sizes to get one pair that fits, or buy one pair and make one foot suffocate or fight to keep its shoe one.

What if you've got flat feet? The tops of your shoes probably rest three inches above the tops of your feet.

Or how about wide toes combined with a narrow heel? You'll notice a shoe that fits your heel snugly causes your toes to grow inward.

But worst of all is the problem of big feet. I know a guy who wore size 14D. There was nothing wrong with him — he was just BIG.

Pam Vandever

SUN News Editor

The problem arose when he decided to get married. He couldn't find any white dress shoes big enough. Or any black shoes or brown shoes for that matter.

He couldn't find ANY shoes except what he usually bought anyway — army boots. So he married in a white tux and a brand new pair of army boots.

Some people wanted to laugh but didn't dare because the guy was so big.

Last I heard, his wife was trying to knit him some house shoes, but couldn't find enough yarn.

Somehow I think he proved the worth of that old saying, "If the shoe fits, wear it."

Washington, D.C. has lost its glamour

Everyone's angry but no one wants to get involved in politics.

Chesapeake taxpayers moan over their disappearing paychecks and hurl complaints at their neighbors and co-workers.

Occasionally, someone gets mad enough to call a city councilman or send a letter to the newspaper. Sometimes it gets a response.

"Call your congressman," was once a way to get something done, but now voters are hardly interested in who their congressman is.

Bob Daniel, a conservative and well-respected congressman, is usually known to get people an answer to their questions.

Perhaps that's why no one opposed him for his seat representing Chesapeake, Portsmouth, southern Virginia Beach and most of the Southside.

Rhonda Miller

SUN Staff Writer

Bill Whitehurst is a name long associated with politics in northern Virginia Beach and Norfolk, and it looks like he is also keeping a good hold on his congressional seat.

With a Democratic president, the two Republican Congressmen have proved that they can hold their own for balance in the two-party system.

Local Democrats, with all the educated and informed people living in Tidewater, could not find one candidate to challenge the Republican stronghold of Tidewater's Republican congressmen.

Doesn't anybody care about going to Washington anymore?

Oberndorf seeks intervention on proposed raise in utility rates

By Lee Cahill
SUN Public Affairs Writer

Virginia Beach Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf failed to convince council to intervene on behalf of Kempsville residents in their fight against increased utility rates proposed by two private utilities companies.

Council did, however, approve a resolution requesting the State Corporation Commission to hold a public hearing on the rate increases within the city and to notify each customer of the two companies by letter.

Council, at an informal meeting of council where the matter was discussed, also instructed City Attorney Dale Bimson to report back to council on the proposed rate increase after studying the strong points, weak points and legal aspects.

Mrs. Oberndorf, at the informal meeting, said she was concerned about the rate increase proposed by Kempsville and County Utilities and suggested that the city intervene on the part of the citizens.

The companies, headed by Stanley Waranch, are asking for an increase of $30 a quarter from $18.45 a quarter at present as well as a payment of $245 for each customer in the Kempsville system and $222 in the County system to pay for connections to the Hampton Roads Sanitation District.

The increase is being requested for the interim period (effective Sept. 1) until the connection to the HRSD plant is made when the rates would presumably be the same as those charged by the city. The city sewage fee is $15 a quarter.

On July 17 council voted against paying $4 million for the two utilities. During the discussion of the proposed sale, Waranch told council that the companies could not meet HRSD standards.

Councilman Reid Ervin said that by intervening for the citizens, council may uncover evidence of any overcharging excessive rates and that the option (of hooking onto the HRSD) is not available.

Mrs. Oberndorf said that three years ago when the State Corporation Commission approved a rate increase, "we didn't know until our bills came." If the interim rates are paid, the citizens would have to file another suit to have money refunded if the increase were not made permanent.

If for nothing else, Mrs. Oberndorf said, intervention will give the city an opportunity to determine facts behind the reasons given by the companies' asking price for the utilities.

Mrs. Oberndorf also suggested hiring outside experts to handle the case which met with objections from Mayor Patrick L. Standing. Councilman John A. Baum also was against having the city intervene.

Mrs. Oberndorf repeated that it was an opportunity for the city to determine the real value of the utilities. She said the people, who plan to hire private attorneys, are agreeable to having the city buy the utilities at a reasonable price.

Ervin said that the city should concern itself with the citizens' case because "we have the responsibility of removing pollution." The companies are major factors in the pollution of the Lynnhaven River.

"If we can do it by opposing the rate increase, why not go to court and find out?...make it as uneconomically unfeasible (for the companies) as possible." He said the city can question the justification of the rate increases.

Aerial advertising continues flight

By Lee Cahill
SUN Public Affairs Writer

A. M. Stevens has been running his serial advertising business for seven years publicizing various tourist attractions in Virginia Beach.

In all that time, he said, he received one complaint.

That is, until a few weeks ago when one of his planes made a forced landing in the water along the resort strip. Then, he told Virginia Beach city council Monday afternoon, he received two complaints — one from Councilman R. L. Riggs and the other from a motel owner.

Stevens was at the council meeting, he said, because he had understood that Riggs was going to introduce an ordinance affecting his business. He said that Riggs had mentioned an ordinance on a TV program.

Riggs said that he was concerned about the situation and thought that guidelines might be necessary.

During the period since the accident, Stevens made a survey of property owners, at the resort from the Lighthouse Restaurant at the south end to 58th Street at the north. He said that he had five sons who assisted him with his business and if the people didn't want the airplanes with their advertising flying along the coast he owed it to his sons to go along with the people's wishes.

Only six persons were against his continuing the operation and over 90 were for the aerial advertising. He said that some motel owners considered it a service to their customers.

"So long as you're not going to make a new law," Stevens said, he had a plan worked out to ease any concern people might have.

The planes are required by law to stay 500 feet away from the beach at any altitude. His planes will fly 500 feet away from the beach and further, staying outboard of the steel pier remains.

And rather than circling over land for a round-trip, will remain over water for the return along the shore exhibiting their banners backwards.

Stevens said that he thinks the backward sign will be read — well, almost as much — by people trying to figure out what the letters say.

Stevens, who is also manager of the South Norfolk Airport in Chesapeake from which he operates his serial advertising business, had five advertising planes last year, but is down to two this year. The planes fly over the water one hour at a time and then return to the airport to change banners.

Riggs assures Stevens that he was "not out to get your job or business...just control."

"I'm the one man who can control those airplanes," Stevens said, and he said Riggs didn't call him. He added that even the Secret Service called him, "not Richmond," when President Carter went on a fishing trip from Rudee Inlet recently.

Riggs said he was satisfied with Stevens arrangements.

TRIAL WORK PERIOD ENCOURAGES
DISABLED TO TEST ABILITY TO WORK

By Harvey J. Ridinger, Field Representative

Probably most of the 2.8 million people getting social security disability benefits would rather work if they could. Unfortunately, severe physical or mental impairments rule out gainful activity for nearly all. But others whose disabilities are less severe or whose condition is improving may feel they can do some kind of work, even though it is part time or involves fewer demands than their old jobs. Too often these people hesitate accepting employment for fear of losing their social security checks.

The social security law recognizes the importance not only of providing financial help to disabled people, but also of giving them hope for rehabilitation. Some are offered vocational rehabilitation services by a State agency. Others manage to return to the work force on their own in spite of their condition, or they may have recovered.

If you are a disabled worker or a person who became disabled before age 22, receiving benefits on a parent's record, and want to try to work despite a severe disability, you are eligible for a "trial work period" of up to 9 months. During those 9 months (not necessarily consecutive), you will continue getting your social security checks while you test your ability to work.

If after 9 months it is decided you are able to do substantial gainful work, your benefits will be paid for an adjustment period of 3 additional months before they stop. If it is decided your work is not substantial gainful work, your checks will continue.

Sometimes, a person's condition may improve considerably in a short period to the point it is no longer disabling. In this case, benefits are stopped because of medical recovery after a 3-month adjustment period even though the trial work period is not over.

Since the trial work provision is intended to give you a chance to see if you can hold a job, minor work activity may be disregarded. As a general rule, only months in which you earn more than $80 must be counted as months of trial work. If you are not employed, only months in which your net earnings are over $20 or you devote more than 15 hours to the business count as trial work months.

At the end of the trial work period the amount of your earnings is critical in determining whether you can perform substantial gainful work. The general rule is if your gross wages (before payroll deductions) are more than $230 a month, you are considered to be doing substantial work. However, if the work you do is about the same in amount and quality as done by other workers in your area who are not disabled, then it could be considered substantial and gainful, even though you earn less than $230 a month.

By the same token, total income of over $230 a month may sometimes not be considered substantial gainful work. In making a decision, consideration is given to hours worked, duties, and job performance. If you are self-employed, other factors such as management activities are taken into consideration.

Sometimes a disabled worker receives a "subsidy" in addition to actual earnings. This is not counted as "earnings" for the trial work period.

If you are a disabled widow, widower, or surviving divorced wife, you are not eligible for a trial work period. If you are able to do substantial gainful work, benefits will stop 3 months after your work begins.

If you become disabled a second time within 5 years after your payments ended, you are not eligible for another trial work period.

Instructional conference planned on educating handicapped children

The Virginia Beach Education Association will sponsor an instructional conference on the education of handicapped children at the Hotel Roanoke, Roanoke, November 9, 10, and 11. The conference is for teachers and the general public. Mrs. Hatwood Futrell, president of the VEA, emphasizes that neither teachers nor parents have been adequately prepared or informed about Public Law 94-142 which becomes effective September 1.

Public Law 94-142, passed by the 94th Congress, requires that public school districts assume the responsibility of educating all handicapped children between the ages of three and eighteen in the least restrictive environment possible.

Virginia has expanded the age range to include all children from two to twenty-one. This means that many handicapped children will be in regular classrooms for the first time this fall.

Reggie Smith, director of human relations for the VEA, will coordinate the conference. Key speakers will be Dr. Fred Wientraub, assistant executive director for the Council of Exceptional Children, and Jim Micklen, director of special education of the Virginia State Department of Education.

Parents seeking further information may contact the Virginia Beach Education Association.

Bowland Incorporated recently held a grand opening at its new location in the London Bridge Industrial Park off London Bridge Road.

In lieu of the traditional ribbon cutting, Donald W. Merrick, the Virginia Beach councilman from Lynnhaven Borough, opened handcuffs to officially launch the corporation in its new quarters. Mainly concerned with security, the Virginia Beach corporation also provides telephone answering and courier services.

The Bowland grand opening was attended by councilwomen Meyera Oberdorf and Barbara Henley. Included among the well wishers were clients, suppliers and members of the media. Although some guests came from Richmond, the majority were from the Tidewater area. Parking was supervised by Bowland uniformed security officers, and the affair was catered by Pollards.

First, Missy McLaughlin removes the polish and trims the toe nails. The skin is softened by a warm whirlpool so that dead layers and callous's can be easily removed with the Credo blade. This is a special instrument purchased from Germany which glides along the surface removing unwanted skin and debris.

The feet and legs are rubbed with a special cream and massaged gently into the skin. Heated booties are placed over the feet and left. This enables the oils to penetrate deep into the pores to further soften. While the booties are being worn you can lay back and get a professional facial from Beautiful Nails own expert Peggy Childress.

Your feet have to tolerate more abuse then the rest of your body so why not give them a break and treat them to something special, like a pedicure.

P.S. This treatment is used by more men then women. Really!

The foot bone's connected to...

By Pam Vandever
SUN News Editor

Take a moment to consider the subject of feet.
Feet. Toes. Ankles. Shoes.

If you don't think they're important then...well...your mother wears army boots!

Where would we be without feet?

There would be no more suffering from cold feet, or athlete's feet, or being pigeon-toed, knock-kneed or bowlegged.

No more complaining about someone who has "feet like a duck" or who dances with "two left feet."

But without feet we'd be bored.

There would be no more "In search of Big Foot." No more playing horse shoes. And -- heaven forbid -- no more football.

Think of the folks who go home after a long day and "put their feet up." Or the superstitious who carry a rabbit's foot for good luck. And don't forget the little girls who thrill to the tale of Cinderella and her glass slipper.

Whether you're flat-footed or on tip toe, whether you're a top dancer or standing with your feet planted firmly on the ground -- feet are pretty important.

Just make sure you "keep on your toes" and you'll never "put your foot in your mouth."

Forget the aspirin, try foot reflexology

By Rhonda J. Miller

She treats feet.

"Through the feet, she also treats the liver, stomach, neck and eyes.

"All parts of the body can be treated through foot reflexology," explains Phoebe Field as she applies pressure to particular points in the foot of Lorraine Kendler in her home on 60th Street in Virginia Beach.

The reflexology treatment was taught to Ms. Field by a specialist in the field of oriental medicine, Adano Ley, whose clinic is located in Texas.

The basis of the theory is that all of the body's nerves run from the feet to the brain, and that physical problems are blockages in the nervous system.

Clearing out the channel is like blowing dust out through a straw.

The reflexology treatment itself is usually limited to under half an hour. If necessary, it can be done several times a week.

Patients can learn to focus on their own physical blockages for themselves, and use simple pressure and foot massage techniques to improve their overall health.

The feet speak.

Shoes, shoes, shoes, everywhere shoes! More glamour to the feet than ever.

Flat lace up shoes and shorter boots are teamed up with wool skirts. Keep your hem one hand length from boot top, unless it's an over the knee boot. The boots are cropped short and the legs are layered heavily instead of the last year look of the knee high boot and lathered clothing.

The night shoe is splashed with rhinestones, gold, silver, satin and anything else that catches the light.

Soft suedes such as the one Carolini designs is an elegant day shoe that can be suited for evening as well.

In the world of men, traditional looking shoes are making a bigger hit than ever this season. Fathers aren't the only one getting that ivy league look this fall. Sleek European dress shoes are another way of making people notice your dress. These classy leathers are good for any tweed suit or cashmere cardigan.

Podiatrist's world is below the ankle

By Rhonda Miller
SUN Staff Writer

"My scope ends at the ankle," says Dr. Tischler as he answers a call from a doctor about his wife's torn knee cartilage.

Feet are an unlimited scope and the energetic podiatrist lets his patients know that everything affects their feet, from smoking to running.

Tischler's diagnosis is often based on hypermobility of the feet, which means that the many bones in the foot move when they should be stable.

Tischler sometimes prescribes a plastic mold of the foot, "orthotic", to keep the foot stable.

To keep the body from straining other muscles and bones to compensate, Tischler sometimes prescribes a plastic mold of the foot, an "orthotic," to keep the foot stable.

As a runner and a doctor who treats many athletes, Tischler sees that latent foot problems often arise once people start putting more pressure on their feet.

Although "the body is made to stand on the feet all day long," everyone needs a routine foot check-up as much as an annual visit to the family doctor or dentist.

Children are most easily treated, but Tischler sees that "changes occur in the body every day," and that any sort of foot problem can be helped with treatment.

"The body is made to stand on the feet all day long."

Tischler began his foot work at an early age, when he helped massage his father's feet to aid an ankle problem.

When he got to medical school, he found that his interest gravitated toward podiatry.

He sees in himself a new image of a foot doctor.

"They used to call us chiropodists, and people thought we were just good for cutting corns and callouses."

Now it's a broad and interesting field, and Tischler sees the interest growing when he speaks to schools and community groups.

His Chesapeake office on Indian River Road is as busy as his Virginia Beach office at Pembroke Two, with one main difference.

All the athletes appear at the Virginia Beach office.

He lays his foot skeleton on the desk, shows the movement of the bones, then takes off his shoes and shows it in his own foot.

He makes sure his patients enjoy learning about their feet by enjoying the sharing of his knowledge.

That's got to be a step in the right direction.

Dr. Jay Tischler

Residential zoning in noise and accident potential zones

Time to wrestle with Oceana

By Lee Cahill
SUN Public Affairs Writer

"When is this council going to wrestle with Oceana?" asked Virginia Beach City Councilman Reid Ervin.

Apparently it wasn't Monday afternoon when council approved higher density zoning for property which is partly within the Navy's noise and accident potential zones.

By a vote of 7-4 council approved the petition of Cameron A. Munden, et al., for changes of zoning from AG-1 Agricultural District to B-2 Community-Business District on a one-acre parcel and from AG-1 Agricultural District to R-8 Residential District on a 9.7 acre parcel on the west side of Oceana Boulevard, south of Harper Road in Princess Anne Borough.

Lt. S.L. Jackson, of the Naval Air Station at Oceana, opposed the rezoning because part of the land falls within the noise and accident potential zones delineated in the Air Installation Compatible Use Zone study.

Calvin Spain, attorney for the applicants, said that only 2 1/4 acres of the property falls within the zones of which a road will take up one acre and open space part of the remainder.

Commander Jackson said that "1/4 this time it's a little more than an acre, the next time it may be 10 acres." He suggested mini-warehouses and added, "we would not like to have any residential development there."

Councilman Donald S. Merrick said the application was deferred twice so that something could be worked out.

Councilman J. Curtis Payne said that he didn't "see that we can render the property worthless."

Merrick said that he understood that the Navy now has $10 million or more available to buy air space.

Ervin said, "When is this council going to wrestle with Oceana?...We're saying whenever we refuse to let a property owner rezone we are taking his property...Is council going to accept the line (AICUZ' delineations) to protect Oceana?"

Councilman John A. Baum said that no appraisal will say the present zoning is the highest and best use for the land.

"You argue...we don't stop until we get to Oceana?" "The federal government has to pay when it takes people's property rights," Baum replied.

"I don't think that's the question," Ervin said.

Voting for approval were Councilmen Payne, Baum, Clarence A. Holland, R. L. Riggs, George R. Ferrell, Mayor Patrick L. Standing, and vice Mayor J. Henry McCoy Jr. Voting against the motion were Councilmen Merrick and Ervin and Councilwomen Meyera Oberdorf and Barbara Henley.

Ordinance to protect residents

By Lee Cahill
SUN Public Affairs Writer

Virginia Beach city council next Monday will consider an ordinance first proposed in 1973, along with other plans to protect residents of homes located in noise or accident zones delineated by the Navy.

Councilman Reid Ervin suggested the ordinance, proposed by him in 1973, as a start in dealing with problems arising from Navy flight activity at Oceana Master Jet Base and Fentress Naval Air Facility in Chesapeake.

He said he was concerned with the way in which preparation of the ordinance is being approached and because the scope of an ordinance being prepared now will apparently be limited to disclosures about aircraft noise and crash zones.

David M. Grochmal, an assistant to the city manager for government relations, has worked on a mandatory proposal for two and one half months. While the Navy has supported a mandatory program, representatives of the Tidewater Builders Association and the Tidewater Real Estate Association are promoting a voluntary disclosure program.

Ervin said Monday afternoon that the council, or a committee of its members, is the logical body to sit with the staff and the city manager with participation from real estate and builder interests as well as the Navy. Reid said that "a newcomer to our city purchasing a dwelling or even renting is entitled to know any potentially undesirable features nearby."

The Navy has prepared an Air Installation Compatible Use Zone study (AICUZ) delineating all noise and accident potential zones around the airports. The Navy has consistently opposed residential or any high density development in these areas, often without success.

Ervin's ordinance requires sellers and lessors of residential property to notify the purchaser or lessee that he is entitled upon request to see copies of the subdivision plat, planned unit development general plan, master transportation plan, aircraft information map, land use map.

A notice to the lessee included states that "because of the presence of heavy aircraft over certain portions of the city of Virginia Beach you are hereby advised that your lessor or his agent is required by law to show you, upon your request, a copy of the current Aircraft Information Map as compiled by the city before any rental options or agreements are signed."

Residents have complained in the past that they were unaware before moving into their homes that they were located in the noise or crash potential zones of the air stations.

First Steps

Have you ever watched a baby learning to walk? His first steps are hesitant, he often falls, but, slowly, he gains more confidence, and, soon, his mother can no longer keep up with him.

First steps of spiritual growth are like this, too. Our faith, at first, is quite uncertain, but as we become more certain of God's love, we gain more confidence. Soon our faith plays a part in every decision we make. Faith in God becomes the guiding principle of our whole life.

The concert stage will be set up in the parking lot of the Roy Rogers Family Restaurant. Free autographed pictures will be distributed before the 8 p.m. show.

During his visit here, Rogers will provide special help to the Virginia Affiliate of the American Heart Association and to the Tidewater and the Peninsula chapters.

From seaman to superintendent

Messick heads service group

From able-bodied seaman in the Merchant Marine Fleet to shipyard production superintendent at Norfolk Naval Shipyard is a long climb up the career ladder. It's a climb Virginia Beach resident, Luther T. (Spike) Messick recently completed when he was promoted to GS-15 as head of the production department's service group shops.

Messick's success story in the shipyard began in 1953 when he was appointed as an apprentice pipefitter. Before that time, he had spent two years in the Army as a paratrooper at Fort Campbell, Ky., coming out as staff sergeant with five years of travel around the world as a merchant seaman.

After his Army stint, Messick decided that he's had enough of traveling and felt like he wanted to stay home. He liked the job stability and opportunities the shipyard had to offer, so he embarked on the apprenticeship in Shop 56, the pipe shop, and was on his way.

Over a 25-year period, Spike has worked at NNSY, completing his apprenticeship and advancing to pipefitter, pipefitter foreman, nuclear engineering technician, Shop 56 nuclear coordinator, mechanical group nuclear director, and Shop 56 production superintendent. He was head of 56 for five and one-half years before his promotion to group superintendent.

Messick's interests in the shipyard go beyond those associated with his job. He is active in several different organizations and currently serves as chairman of the Co-Operative Associations Board of Directors.

He is a member of the Navy Yard Credit Union's Credit Committee and for the last two years has served as national secretary for the National Association of Superintendents.

He is also past president of the NNSY Superintendents Association. In addition, last year he served as chairman of the shipyard's Combined Federal Campaign.

Whenever he has the time to relax, he enjoys golfing. He and his wife and two sons now live in the Lake Shores section of Virginia Beach.

CDR Mike Hamilton, material support officer, has taken on the additional job as management services officer and controller at the Norfolk Naval Air Rework Facility. Oriskany (CVA-34); NAS Corpus Christi; NAF Okinawa; Naval Shipyard, Charleston; and U.S.S. Pandemonium.

Joining the Navy in 1954, he was commissioned an ensign in 1955.

Over the years, Borberg said, the district has cooperated with the SWCB but the "board keeps promising money...We can't wait any longer." By 1983 the HRSD will run out of capacity.

If all of the needed projects were approved now, Borberg said, the Atlantic Plant and the Nasomond plant will operate at 70 percent capacity when finished, which "is not a whole lot of growth built into the plants."

He suggested council contact the Water Control Board members, and the staff and "let your desires be known."

Councilman Reid Ervin also suggested calling Congressmen Robert Daniel and William Whitehurst. "It's fine the governor makes the appointments, but it's time we had a representative there," he said.

Borberg pointed out that the HRSD has spent much of its own funds for the sanitation system rather than the expected 75 percent (federal), 25 percent (local) participation.

From 1973 $21,686 in HRSD funds have gone into the Chesapeake-Elizabeth and Atlantic Plant and System Projects against a federal contribution of $20,560,000.

Proposed projects - Atlantic and Chesapeake-Elizabeth Plant and System call for federal spending of 173,400,000 and HRSD spending of $24,500,000.

To date, the total federal expenditure ($42,826,000) has fallen below the district's ($42,200,000).

Projected spending in the district calls for $126.5 million in federal funds, and $42.2 in district funds.

Borberg indicated that as more local funds are used to expand and upgrade facilities, rates will have to be increased.

City continues water search

By Lee Cahill
SUN Public Affairs Writer

Although Virginia Beach supports Lake Gaston as the primary long-range water resource for southeastern Virginia the city will continue its hunt for alternative water sources.

City council Monday afternoon approved a resolution supporting the selection of Lake Gaston by the U.S. Corps of Engineers as a primary water source for the area. The resolution also stated it was with the understanding that the Southeastern Public Service Authority and the city of Virginia Beach will continue to explore more expedient alternatives in the interim until the Lake Gaston source becomes available.

City manager George L. Hanbury noted that the city is continuing its exploration through the Water Resources Study being conducted by Wiley and Wilson.

The Southeastern Public Service Authority has consistently recommended the use of the Blackwater-Nottoway system as the primary water supply source for the region. The water available there, however, has been allocated to Union Camp and others.

Mayor Patrick L. Standing said that this was not the only problem. Even if the water was available, the authority would have to secure permission for impoundment - diversion of the water.

Bridge victory goes to Beach woman

Eve Pace of 812 Raymond, Virginia Beach, and Mike Anapol of Bayonne, NJ, were among Master Point winners at the 1978 Summer North America Championships of the American Contract Bridge League in Toronto July 21-30.

They won first in their section in the Ontario Pairs, a one-day championship in which 1,776 players competed. The event was among four North American Championships, eight Eastern States championships, and 48 other events which drew 7,000 players to ten days of competition here. Bridge players of every class of skill compete during the meet, one of three major tournaments each year sponsored by the ACBL. Master Point awards are symbols of bridge victories.

The ACBL is a non-profit organization of some 200,000 competitive players in the United States, Canada, Mexico and Bermuda. It conducts 900 tournaments a year and 5,000 clubs provide weekly games throughout the continent.

Stained glass studio moves to Beach

The Tiffany Touch Stained Glass Studio and School has completed the move from 21st Street in Norfolk to its new quarters at 5773 Princess Anne Road, Virginia Beach.

Located in the Arrowhead section of Kempville, just off the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Expressway at Newtown Road, The Tiffany Touch will offer a professional beginner's course in leaded stained glass design and fabrication starting September 19.

Day and evening sessions, limited to ten each, are rapidly filling. Advanced classes will be offered at a later date. The instructor is Bridget Watson, Professional Artisan, who holds a Master of Art and Design from the American Stained Glass Institute.

As in prior sessions, each student completing the 16-hour, eight-week course, will fabricate a Tiffany-type mirror equal to or exceeding the $30 tuition cost. Tools and materials valued at approximately $50 are needed.

Prospective students are urged to contact the studio promptly at 499-8553 or visit between nine and five daily.

Things Unlimited likes ad

Jenny Jacobs has been very happy with the results of advertisements in the Chesapeake POST/Virginia Beach SUN.

As manager of Things Unlimited New and Used in Virginia Beach she recently advertised used refrigerators and window screens.

"We have been really pleased with the advertisement in the classified section and whenever we advertise a specific item we get lots of calls on that item," said Jacobs.

The store is run for the benefit of the Friends School on Laskin Road. Like their name implies they have many things for sale, new and used, and some lovely antiques.

"We know the calls are created by the ad in your paper because that is the only place we are advertising that particular item or items."

For quick results, call 481-3477.

Kittens welcome with ad

"The ad worked!" A few months ago Joseph D. Salmon of Virginia Beach advertised free kittens in the Chesapeake POST/Virginia Beach SUN.

"Considering someone giving away kittens is about as welcome as the plague," said Salmon.

"I am very happy with the response."

According to Salmon, the reason for such good results is that the paper is read by local families.

"The people who answered our ad lived within five miles of our house."

For quick results, call 481-3477.

Marine quality is Viking's business

By Elizabeth George

Viking Marine has a lot to offer its customers with its variety of boats, quality service department and a complete line of accessories.

Established in 1967, the business was taken over on September 1, 1977 by J.D. Maume and David J. Maume.

"We were looking for a growing concern of good growth potential and Viking fit the bill," said David.

J.D. is president of the company and has had 20 years experience in the automotive industry. He was formerly the dealer placement manager for Chrysler Corporation in Pittsburgh. David is vice president and has had 17 years experience as a sales representative for Long Star Industry in the Norfolk and Virginia Beach areas.

According to David Maume, it has been a successful first year in business. Presently, Viking Marine employs eight people including head mechanic Ken Hauk. Hauk apparently has a loyal following of Johnson motor owners throughout all of southside Hampton Roads.

Viking Marine is an authorized dealer for Aristocraft, Boston Whaler, Fiberform, Johnson outboard motors, Ranger bass boats, Starcraft and Wellcraft.

"We are particularly excited about taking in the new Wellcraft models," said Maume.

As Wellcraft's newest dealer in Tidewater, Viking Marine is one of the first dealers on the east coast to receive the 1979 models.

The company is good said Maume, "Because of the quality boats in which we deal and the attention paid to details and customers needs which are on the top of our priority list."

Shark fishing in Virginia Beach

Snagging a shark can be risky business. You've got to have plenty of skill and patience — not to mention courage. But if you succeed, the prize is a spectacular sight, as evidenced by this tiger shark captured by Virginia Beach fisherman Gary Seay during the 3rd Annual Shark Tournament held in Virginia Beach last weekend. Bill Walker, left, helped unload the 518 3/4 lb. monster while Seay, right, stepped back to take a look at his catch. Seay set a new state record with a later catch of an 851 1/2 lb. tiger shark, and ended up winning both first and second place in the tournament. More pictures and stories on how it's done on page 4. ### Businessmen complain

Excessive utility fees block growth

Leo Cahill
Virginia Beach Sun Public Affairs Writer

Virginia Beach resort area businessmen claim excessive sewer and water line fees are blocking growth. An attorney for the Innkeepers Association told city council Monday afternoon that the fees should be reduced by 50 percent.

City manager George L. Hanbury agreed that fees for motels, hotels and commercial establishments were higher than comparable fees for private homes, but that before he could recommend any reduction he would have to have a study. He said that a study is being made by Buck Siefert & Yost in conjunction with a study of rates for the upcoming double-barrel bond issue.

Attorney Grover Wright, representing the Innkeepers, said that innkeepers are not going to start additions, wanted in the fall, because water and sewer line fees are too high. He said that line fees are $1,200 a room while $5 is charged for each room for maintenance — $2 when the room is unused.

He said that while a motel unit puts a great load on the system, it is only for a portion of the year. He asked that council consider reducing the figure by more than 50 percent, adding that the fee is four times what it should be.

He asked that the motel owners who want to start construction be charged 50 percent of the cost at present. The city permits an owner to pay 25 percent down and the balance in three payments over three years at eight percent interest.

Wright suggested the owners be allowed to pay 25 percent of 50 percent of the fee now with the remaining part of the 50 percent paid over three years. If the fee decided on by the city is higher than the 50 percent, Wright said, adjustments could be made later.

Hanbury said that he would rather have the owners pay all of the fee and then have the city make the refund if necessary.

Rita Murphy, manager of Bay Cove Restaurant, said that the restaurant has been trying to expand since last September to provide seating for 60 more people. She said it would cost the restaurant $38 in sewer fees and $25 in water fees for each additional seat. She said the restaurant had already paid for the lines once and still operates on a domestic line.

Water testing program sought

$210,000 from Beach could net federal grant

Virginia Beach Sun Public Affairs Writer

Virginia Beach city council next Monday will be asked to appropriate $210,000 for a brackish and fresh ground water testing program expected to improve the city's chances of securing a federal grant for a two million-gallon-a-day desalinization experiment.

City Manager George L. Hanbury told council Monday at an informal session that he would make the appropriation recommendation whether or not a grant were involved because of the city's need for a water source.

He added that although desalting procedures have not been cost competitive in the past, new methods may change that.

Although desalting procedures have not been cost competitive in the past, new methods may change that.

Aubrey Watts, utilities director, recently visited plants in Florida that produce over three million gallons of water a day, Hanbury said, with costs ranging from 85 cents to 51 cents a gallon.

He compared these prices with the cost of Norfolk water which is sold to the Beach for 48 cents 1,000 gallons and then resold to Virginia Beach users for 90 cents 1,000 gallons. Hanbury said that in 20 years he could envision a city manager of Virginia Beach offering water to sell to Norfolk instead of buying from Norfolk.

The testing activities were recommended by the firm of Wiley & Wilson, Inc., employed by the city to study Beach water sources. The activities are expected to be completed between now and January 1994 to coincide with the announcement of grant recipients by the Office of Water Research and Technology (OWRT) of the Department of the Interior.

The Beach's grant application will be on the basis of a two-million-gallon-a-day plant.

Hanbury said that it was "absolutely necessary that we proceed with monitoring wells with deep brackish water in sufficient quantity for a two-million-gallon-a-day grant."

He said that he hoped that any expenditure made by the city now would be applied toward the city's 10 percent match. He said that chances for receiving the grant have been improved by the emphasis of the Environmental Protection Authority on the elimination of chlorinated hydrocarbons and that there have been no field tests on what would be a safe yield for ground water use.

The $210,000 would be used to develop specifications for brackish and fresh wells and advertise bids, OWRT grant activities with schematic desalting facility layout, constructing brackish ground water monitoring wells with sampling and limited pumping tests, conducting testing of one existing fresh ground water well field.

Hanbury said that fresh water wells are available at Stumpy Lake and Pembroke and that brackish and fresh water would be combined to reduce the amount of desalinization necessary.

The city manager said that he didn't want a repeat of last summer when the city was assured of only 45-50 day supply of water.

Hanbury said he didn't want a repeat of last summer when the city was assured of only 45-50 day supply of water.

Warren F. Cline, of the Virginia Beach office of Wiley & Wilson said that the proposed program will better the city's chances of obtaining the desalting demonstration grant from OWRT by making a positive impression on the OWRT evaluation team scheduled to visit the city in October.

Geraghty & Miller, Inc. consulting firm in groundwater geology and hydrology, made a preliminary study of the potential for developing additional supplies of fresh groundwater, the feasibility of developing brackish ground water suitable for the desalting the places where such developments would be feasible. The report is part of the Water Resources Study.

Cline said that the combined water demand of Norfolk and Virginia Beach will exceed the safe yield of the present system by 1986 and by 1990 an additional water supply of five million gallons per day will be required.

Zoning permits offices

Offices will be permitted in a H-1 Hotel District under provisions of an ordinance approved Monday afternoon by Virginia Beach city council.

Ocean front hotels (H-2 District) are already permitted to have offices.

Council also approved the application of the Beach Northampton Vacation, Inc., for a conditional use permit for real estate and insurance offices on a 4.339 acre parcel on the south side of Northampton Boulevard, east of Baker Road (Holiday Inn Bridge Tunnel) which is in an H-1 zone.

Retirement unnecessary

Virginia Beach city council appointees will be excluded from the mandatory retirement provision in the City Code.

Councilman Clarence A. Holland Monday afternoon proposed an ordinance amendment excluding council appointees from mandatory retirement at age 70 because, he said, it was an advantage to retain people.

At the same meeting council approved the appointment of two council members to review the duties of city clerk, a council appointment, and to consider applications for the position which is now held by Richard J. Webbon. Webbon will reach the mandatory retirement age.

Serving on the committee will be J. Curtis Payne, chairman, and Reid Ervin.

Mayor Patrick L. Standing, who made the appointments also named Vice Mayor J. Henry McCoy Jr., chairman, and Councilman Donald Merrick on a committee to study boards and committees and better ways to coordinate them to maintain a list of prospective members.

Babysitting permitted

A Fox Run couple has been given permission to babysit for as many as nine children in their home.

In approving a conditional use permit for the couple Leo and Montrose Wood, for a home occupation on a 10,250 square foot parcel on Edwin Drive, in Kempville Borough, Virginia Beach city council overrode the recommendation of the Planning Commission for denial.

The city administration recommended approval, however, and the application was approved by a vote of 10-1 with Councilman George R. Ferrell voting against the motion.

Opposition, which had appeared at the Planning Commission hearing, was absent at the council meeting.

The permit will be good for a year. Mrs. Wood, who said that she had been babysitting for nine years and has a state license, said that she planned to phase out the service in two years.

Zoning change approved

Virginia Beach city council approved the application of Dean S. Potter, Gordon B. Potter and John Ray Potter for a change of zoning from R-4 Residential District to O-1 Office District on a 5.335 acre parcel located west of First Colonial Road and south of Old Donation Parkway, Lynnhaven Borough. The existing zoning allows 97 single-family homes, while the proposed zoning allows 527 apartment units as well as office uses.

The kids are ready

I know a little girl who, two months ago, never wanted to have to go to school again. Just the other day, she told me she couldn't wait for school to start.

When kids start making statements like that, you know summer is drawing near its end.

You'd better hurry if you want to squeeze in that last minute tan. The stores have replaced all their bathing suits with sweaters and coats.

Back-to-school sales are beginning to pop up all over town.

All the rain, rain, rain is bringing just a taste of the cooler days to come.

Husbands, brothers and boyfriends are settling back in their favorite chairs to watch the first of the pre-season football games on TV. And the athletes themselves are trying to prove their worth at football practice.

Employers liable for tax on tips

A few weeks ago we discussed how cash tips are covered by social security and how they help increase future benefits for the employee and his or her family.

A recent change in the social security law that may have escaped the attention of some people provides additional social security tax liability for employers whose employees receive part of their earnings in the form of cash tips.

Under the old law employers did not have to pay social security taxes on amounts that are deemed to be earnings for purposes of meeting the requirements of the minimum wage law. In many jobs where low wages are paid in expectation of substantial tips, the Internal Revenue Code allows such tips to be considered earnings for up to 50 percent of the minimum wage. Now these deemed amounts will also be considered earnings for social security purposes.

The new law provides that an employer must pay social security tax on amounts that are deemed to be earnings for purposes of meeting the requirements of the minimum wage law. In many jobs where low wages are paid in expectation of substantial tips, the Internal Revenue Code allows such tips to be considered earnings for up to 50 percent of the minimum wage. Now these deemed amounts will also be considered earnings for social security purposes.

The reporting of tips differs in some respects from the reporting of other wages and people who work as waitresses, bartenders, cabdrivers, and other service occupations, full time or part time, should be aware of the differences.

Cash tips that total $20 or more in a month from one employer should be reported. The tips are reported to the employer in writing by the 10th of the month for the previous month. Employers may require reports more often.

It is important that the reports be made on time. If for any reason you fail to report your tips on time, you may report them on your Federal income tax return. A special form is available from IRS.

A penalty may be imposed for nonreporting of tips, as it is for the nonreporting of other earnings.

The greater penalty for failure to report tips may come later, however, when a person begins to receive social security benefits. Since the amount of the check is based on annual earnings over one's working career, a person may increase his or her benefits significantly by reporting tips as earnings for social security purposes. For those who fail to report, the gap between their social security benefits and their pre-retirement income is often much greater than it should be since the benefits do not reflect all of their pre-retirement earnings.

It makes sense to report tips. The money can make a difference at a time when you need it. Retirement, disability, or premature death leaving a young family may mean that social security is the only means of support. The amount of these benefits will be based on the earnings you report.

For more information on tips stop by the office for a leaflet on "Social Security and Cash Tips."

Beach population grows big, bigger

Virginia Beach Sun Public Affairs Writer

In 1900 Princess Anne County was home to 11,192 people in an area which was actually larger than the present city of Virginia Beach.

Parts of the county were later annexed by Norfolk, but in 1990, the Virginia Beach real estate research team estimates the population of the city of Virginia Beach will reach a high of 464,443, a medium of 385,000 and a low of 316,293.

The Southeastern Virginia Planning District Commission forecast comes closest to the low 314,450.

But whatever statistics you're looking at Virginia Beach, the successor of Old Princess Anne County, will be big — bigger.

From April, 1970 (using U.S. Census figures) to July 1978 (using Planning Department Estimates), the city's population has increased 51 percent, from 172,106 to 259,806. The greatest percentage increase has been in Kempsville which grew 111 percent from 34,665 to 73,155, but Lynnhaven remains the most populated borough with 84,910 people compared to 57,841 for a 46.8 percent increase.

In the eight years, Princess Anne Borough increased 74.2 percent from 16,211 to 28,234; Bayside 13.8 percent from 50,607 to 57,574; Blackwater, 6.2 percent from 801 to 851; Pungo 14.7 percent from 2,710 to 3,109 and Virginia Beach 29.1 percent from 9,271 to 11,973.

In the one year from July 1977 to July 1978 the city grew 3.5 percent from 251,063 to 259,805.

Population estimates of the Tayloe Murphy Institute of the University of Virginia have traditionally been lower than city estimates. For example the Tayloe Murphy estimate for 1977 was 238,447.

Tayloe Murphy estimates for the median income of a Virginia Beach family in 1980 is $19,762 compared to the $17,725 for 1977.

Taxable sales in Virginia Beach are keeping pace with the population with Tayloe Murphy reporting 637,136,999 in 1977 compared to 136,172,000 in 1973.

Appointments selected by open vote

Leo Cahill
Virginia Beach Sun Public Affairs Writer

The straw vote was out, three persons were appointed to a commission and an authority after some discussion in public and with no apparent repercussions.

"I was tickled to death that we could nominate these people and discuss them in public," said Virginia Beach Councilman Reid Ervin.

Council, by consensus, decided: at an executive session Monday afternoon to have an open vote on the appointments. In the past, nominations and discussions took place during an executive session with the voting, in open session, always unanimous, a mere formality.

Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf bucked against the straw (unofficial) vote a couple of months ago when she nominated to the board someone in opposition to the council's choice. Her vote was the only one cast for her candidate.

That was before the new council took office on July 1.

Monday her nominee for membership to the Virginia Beach Industrial Development Authority won by a vote of 8-3. He is Robert W. Berry Jr.

Voting for Berry were Councilmen Reid Ervin, Donald Merrick, J. Curtis Payne and R. L. Riggs, Councilwomen Meyera Oberndorf and Barbara Henley, and Mayor Patrick L. Standing and Vice Mayor J. Henry McCoy.

Voting for Andrew W. Doney were Councilmen Clarence A. Holland, who made the nomination, John A. Baum and George R. Ferrell.

City manager George L. Hanbury was reelected to the Southeastern Virginia Planning District Commission over former Councilman John R. Griffin for the citizen's position. Griffin served on the commission as the council's representative.

Voting for Hanbury were Councilmen Reid Ervin, Donald Merrick, J. Curtis Payne, and R. L. Riggs, Councilwomen Meyera Oberndorf and Barbara Henley and vice Mayor J. Henry McCoy Jr. Voting for Griffin were Mayor Patrick L. Standing and Councilmen John A. Baum, George R. Ferrell and Clarence A. Holland.

Baum was elected over Donald Merrick, to fill the unexpired term of Griffin which expires on June 30, 1979. Voting for Merrick were Councilmen Ervin, Merrick and Riggs, and Councilwomen Meyera Oberndorf and Barbara Henley. Voting for Baum were Councilmen Baum, Ferrell, Holland, Payne, Mayor Standing and Vice Mayor McCoy.

After the elections, Payne remarked it "looks like the (new) council will work together as good or better than" he had expected.

Senior citizens request traffic light

Cassandra Barnes doesn't always need an invitation to become a participant as well as a reporter at Virginia Beach city council meetings. She's always ready, welcome or not, to share her information on the Virginia Beach scene.

So Monday afternoon, it was a surprise when she became speechless, almost, when Councilman Clarence A. Holland invited her to discuss the pedestrian predicament in the vicinity of the Mayflower Hotel at the beach.

Holland noted that the stoplight had been removed at 34th Street and Atlantic Avenue and that pedestrians, especially the older people at the Mayflower, needed a way to get to the ocean front safely. Mrs. Barnes lives at the Mayflower. She is also a senior citizen who works daily as a reporter for a local radio station.

After the initial shock at being invited to speak — for a change — wore off Mrs. Barnes remarked, "Drivers don't like older people...We'd love a light." Mrs. Barnes said that of the 350 or so occupants of the Mayflower, over 200 probably are senior citizens.

City manager George L. Hanbury said that while studies show that a light was not justified after one-way streets were instituted for streets running east and west, the city was aware of the problem of the Mayflower and its senior citizens and is installing a pedestrian light with a push button and a walkway.

The light will be on Pacific Avenue, right in front of the Mayflower door between 34th and 35th Street. The city had to get permission from the state to make the installation, he said. Hanbury said that the city had also just finished a pedestrian crosswalk on Atlantic.

Mrs. Barnes, who has lived at the Mayflower for over 20 years, said that most of the tenants do not own cars and many are less able than she to get around on the busy streets.

Skateboard competition is August 24

Youngsters between the ages of six and 12 years of age are invited to participate in skateboard competition on August 24 at the skateboard bowl in Mt. Trashmore Park.

Competition will begin at 9 a.m. Skateboarders will compete in bowl runs and slalom runs.

Tall tales win leprechaun visit

Buy a bucket of bloodworms.

Make up a reel story.

Hook 'em or fry 'em, it's time for fish stories.

Tall as a tale may be, make it taller.

Send it to the 1978 Gladding Tall Tales Contest and find yourself fishing on the west coast of the land of leprechauns.

Virginia Beach fishermen have the chance to drop their hooks into the romantic waters of Burrishoole System, the River Moy, and the Newport River.

Sure it's great to fish off the wooden pier, but imagine staying in a picturesque stone country inn with fine Irish cuisine.

To top off the temptation, the tallest tale teller wins a boatload of outdoor fishing gear including gadgets like invincible fly lines, fishfinders and a life vest.

It's all for a good cause, says the Gladding International Sport Fishing Museum in South Otsele, New York.

Rhonda Miller

SUN Staff Writer

The museum's trustees sponsor the contest because they believe that the "tall tale" is an important part of fishing lore, to emphasize the role of this noble sport in our national culture, and to stress the need for increased sportfishing conservation efforts.

Entries, with name, address, and telephone number, should be sent to:

Gladding Fishing Tall Tales Contest
P.O. Box 586, Back Bay Annex
Boston, Mass 02117

I wonder if they'd like the story about using the saltwater bait in fresh water, fresh water bait in salt water, and then finally getting a bite on the peanut butter sandwich...

Tall tale winner gets to stay at the picturesque Newport House, County Mayo, on the west coast of Ireland.

Twenty-six respite and foster care workers in Virginia Beach have completed their training and are ready to provide temporary care for the mentally retarded and the emotionally or physically handicapped. The students received their Tidewater Community College certificates in recent ceremonies at the Camp Pendleton Center.

The training program was a project of the Virginia Beach Mental Health/Mental Retardation Community Services Board under a Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) grant.

The Virginia Beach campus of Tidewater Community College provided instructors, classroom space and office space for the program under a contract agreement with the city of Virginia Beach.

Students received 15 weeks of training, including 10 weeks of classroom study in dealing with the disabled and five weeks of practical employment experience with agencies which serve the mentally retarded and the emotionally or physically handicapped.

Training project coordinator, Nancy Shade, says graduates of the program have a number of employment options available to them.

Thirty families have requested respite care for handicapped family members, and a number of public and private agencies have positions available for those trained to care for the disabled.

In addition, the respite and foster care course has inspired several graduates to continue their education in programs designed to serve the disabled.

Businessmen complain of fees

Charles Burlage, owner of the Holiday Inn at 25th Street and Atlantic Avenue, said that his 103-room hotel would generate $153,000 in revenue this year. "When you slow down the hotel industry you cut off the flow of money," he said. He added that the city could probably save 3,000 more hotel rooms.

Burlage also believes that the city should have someone in Washington at all times to try to get Fort Story, which "ought to be for the people for all time," and to have more parking at the beach. He also advised against any construction over eight or nine stories to prevent shading the beach.

Tom Lyons of the Holiday Inn on 39th Street, said that sales taxes, real estate taxes, personal property taxes and license fees account for $172,325 in revenues to the city, equivalent to tax revenues of 1500 new homes.

Councilman Reid Ervin agreed that the fees were excessive, but that the Beach Borough utilities system was not adequate and fees were needed to replace it. In reference to Wright's request that the innkeepers pay 50 percent of the fees, Ervin asked, "What about the people who pay?"

Hanbury said that he didn't think the report was going to recommend a 50 percent reduction and that the system needed upgrading even with no expansion.

Councilman W. L. Riggs, who had invited the innkeepers to address council, said, "If we're not willing to bend some now, the hotel, motel and restaurant business will come to a standstill."

He said that the Arts and Conference Center will require enough rooms for 10,000 people. "We have enough for 7,000 to 8,000."

Wright noted that the Arts and Conference Center is predicted on an increase of 3,000 rooms.

Battling sharks proves thrilling challenge for Beach fishermen

By PAM VANDEVEER
Virginia Beach Sun Staff Writer

Shark fishing. It's a challenge that calls for skill, stamina and daring.

Those traits were displayed in full measure when 28 fishing boats left the Lynnhaven Dry Storage Marina last Saturday morning, all hoping to catch the biggest shark of all in Virginia Beach's 3rd Annual Shark Tournament.

The results did indeed net the biggest shark of all — an 851 1/4 lb. tiger shark, captured by Virginia Beach fisherman Gary Seay, set a new state record for the largest fish caught.

But Seay couldn't settle for just first place. He also won the second place prize with a 518 3/4 lb. tiger shark.

Third place winner in the two day tournament was Ted Sergeant, who brought home a 197 lb. sand tiger shark. Sergeant also caught two other sharks during the competition, ranging from 150 to 197 lbs.

J. W. Huffman, member of the tournament committee, outlined some of the procedure and things to expect when tackling shark fishing.

"The boats head out to the Gulf stream, the Eastern Shore, or may not even leave the bay," he said. "The first thing you do is farm a chum slick to attract the sharks."

The chum slick may be made up of dead fish such as menhaden or bluefish. "You just sort of ladle it over," he explained. "The sharks' sensors pick up the blood and oil from the fish and they start heading your way."

"Once you've put out the chum slick you definitely don't want to go swimming!"

When the sharks get the scent of food they go into a feeding frenzy, the retired Marine said. "They'll try to eat anything — even the boat."

Using fish like trout or flounder for bait, the fisherman then lets his boat drift with the chum line.

"You leave your rod out of gear," said Huffman.

"When a shark hits your bait he carries it in his teeth and may run off 200-1000 yards."

"When he stops, he eats the bait. That's when you fight him and try to get him to the boat."

"Sometimes the shark may swim back to the boat as fast as he left. He might even run into it. I've had people get knocked down inside a boat because the shark hit it so hard."

Huffman then warned of Mako sharks — they could actually jump inside the boat. "If one jumps in, he will tear up the boat snapping, biting and slapping his tail around."

Once you have caught your shark, you tie it by its tail to the boat and drag it backwards.

"It takes a long time for a shark to die," said Huffman. "You don't dare go near its mouth even after you've got him to shore. Once a shark is dead its muscles could still go into a sort of spasm and that mouth could snap and take your arm right off."

"I've fished all over the world," Huffman concluded. "Shark fishing is dangerous, but it's the only kind I care about."

Winning fisherman Seay said he has been shark fishing for about three and a half years.

On Saturday he and partner Bill Walker went out in the "Lady Dawn" toward the Eastern Shore.

Once his 518 3/4 lb. shark was hooked, it took almost an hour to bring her in.

Going out again on Sunday, he returned with an even bigger prize — an 851 1/4 lb. tiger shark and a new state record.

Seay and Sergeant will receive trophies and cash prizes as winners of the tournament.

Trophies were donated by Wayne McClusky of the Dry Storage Marina, first place; Billy Dunn of Anchor Inn Marina, second place; and Cecil Harrison of Higgins Realty, third place.

Stay away from those jaws! Even after a shark is dead those jaws can snap.

Surfing comes naturally to underwater expert

By PAM VANDEVEER
Virginia Beach Sun News Editor

Learning to surf came naturally to Chuck Conklin. After being a member of the Navy's underwater demolition team and diving and swimming all over the world, surfing seemed only logical.

Conklin now considers Virginia Beach to be his home, and owns Pete Smith's Surf Shop at 28th Street and Pacific Avenue.

"I like Virginia Beach because of its central location on the east coast," he says, "and because the people here are really friendly."

Originally from Maine, Conklin began traveling as a member of the Navy's underwater demolition team.

"After that I went to the Caribbean and taught diving for a year," he recalls. "Then I went to Ireland and worked as a diver on the Lusitania project, trying to salvage wreckage."

He began surfing in 1963 when he moved to Virginia Beach.

"I worked at Cycle World for five years. That retail sales experience combined with my surfing knowledge enabled me to take over this surf shop three years ago."

Conklin believes in keeping a friendly, casual atmosphere in the shop. Although business details now consume much of his time, he still looks forward to waiting on customers personally as much as possible.

Hobie 18

One of the decade's greatest achievements in catamaran design and technology.

Equipped with more specially designed features than any other catamaran on the market, the Hobie 18 is a boat for the sailing connoisseur who desires ultimate "tunability."

Adjustable spreader bars allow control of mast bend both fore-aft and athwartships. Halyards are internal, allowing an efficient air flow over sails. Gracefully arched crossbars provide a high wing clearance. The traveler system is integral, built right into the rear crossbar. A roller furling jib, complete with luff tension control, allows for immediate reduction of sail area. Outhaul, barberhaul and mast rotation controls are internal within the boom; all leads are adjustable.

Conceived jointly by Hobie Alter and Phil Edwards, the "18" represents the most sophisticated development project within the ten year span of Hobie Cat lineage.

Surfers have their way in Virginia Beach

Mark Maynard of 81st Street finds a hot spot to surf along the north end of Virginia Beach

Lee Cahill
 Virginia Beach Sun Public Affairs Writer

Surfers who have been bombarding Virginia Beach City council members and the administration with calls, will have their way.

Until the steel pier surfing pier is again available for surfing, the existing surfing area to the north will be extended on the north and south sides, keeping the area to 500 feet.

The steel pier was declared off limits last week when debris from the pier, which has been torn down, proved to be a hazard for the surfers.

City manager George L. Hanbury said that the owner of the pier, was required to remove the pilings five feet beneath the water but "I feel the developer did not do that although the owner said it had been done."

He said that Public Works crewmen had been instructed to clean up the debris and that if it is found that the owner did not do the required work, the city will require payment.

Development fund getting too complex

The Community Development program, which has been intended to be less cumbersome than the old block grant for depressed areas, is getting to be just like the old block grant.

Virginia Beach city manager George L. Hanbury told council Monday afternoon at an informal session that the city had considered the grant program as a way of providing low interest loans and grants to citizens who cannot afford to hook up to city water and sewer.

At the suggestion of the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) a corporation was formed to handle the loans. Now, Hanbury said, the corporation may not qualify.

Like the old block grant which was laden with conditions and criteria, the Community Development Program has been acquiring more of the same type criteria. "Every week we get a memo with new conditions," Hanbury said.

If the grant even touches any function, all the conditions have to be met. As a result, the city, which has been using its own departments operating with general funds to help in community development activities, may not be able to continue this practice. The work will have to be done with Community Development funds and the money available for the citizens will be reduced.

"If the rules become more of a burden, the whole purpose of the grant will be defeated."

Sam Houston, who serves on the Community Development committee, agreed, saying the whole situation was frustrating.

Senior sales representative named for Virginia Beach Convention Bureau

Timothy H. Thomas has been appointed senior sales representative of the Virginia Beach Convention Bureau. It was announced today by the city's director of economic development, A. James De Bellis.

Thomas, 39, has been sales manager for the Cavalier Hotels for the past two years, and before that in the sales department of the Sheraton Beach Inn. He also was group sales manager of Cruise International.

He and his wife, Mary Ben, and their two children have lived in the city for the past five years.

The Virginia Beach Convention Bureau, a division of the Department of Economic Development, recently became an affiliate member of the International Association of Convention and Visitors Bureaus.

The bureau is soliciting large state, regional and national conventions, exhibitions and trade shows for the Virginia Beach Arts and Conference Center, now under construction and due to open in February 1980. Heading up the bureau's efforts since it was formed in April 1977 is Hugh C. Baron, coordinator.

Council looks into country club zone

The city of Virginia Beach is considering inclusion of a country club classification in its Comprehensive Zoning Ordinance.

Country clubs are now permitted as a conditional use under other types of zoning.

City manager George L. Hanbury told council Monday afternoon that city planner Robert Scott is looking into country club type zoning so that areas could be rezoned specifically for country clubs. This would eliminate the danger of rezoning property from residential to commercial use to permit country club construction and then have the owners use the property for other commercial uses.

The matter came up with an application of the Virginia Beach Racquet Club North Associates for a conditional use permit for handball and racquetball courts, additional outdoor courts, clubhouse with restaurant and additional partially-enclosed indoor courts on an eight-acre parcel north of the intersection of Great Neck Road and Thomas Bishop Lane.

Attorney Grover Wright, representing the Great Neck Association of Civic Leagues, opposed the petition, pointing out that the application as well as the existing facility to not comply as recreational facilities of an outdoor nature permitted in a residential zone. The area is a highly restricted residential area.

The club at present has enclosed tennis courts, which were permitted by the city, Hanbury said, because the building inspector considered the enclosure temporary.

Council voted to allow the application to be withdrawn and instructed Hanbury find out why the building permit for the tennis court enclosure was issued.

When you hire a new employee through the Work Incentive (WIN) program, you get a tax credit of 20% of that person's wages. And if on-the-job training is needed, you can be reimbursed for costs up to 50% of the entry level wage for the entire length of that training.

What do you say to your customers when you have to increase prices?

When somebody raises the price of lemons, somebody else has to pay more for lemonade.

And no matter how much you have to see your customers' expenses go up, if you own the lemonade stand, you have to raise your prices.

It's that way with electricity. Prices for the fuels needed to generate electricity climb constantly. Add to that inflation and the rising costs of financing and constructing new power plants, and you've got the inevitable—price increases.

Vepco will continue to fight for a reliable, affordable supply of electricity. And we'll continue to strive for an economical and balanced use of fuels.

Of course, that doesn't mean those unwanted increases will just go away. But it does mean they'll be kept as low as possible. And in inflationary times like these, that in itself is some encouragement.

Nature hikes uncover secrets

Want to walk where the pirate Blackbeard once roamed, hunt insects, reptiles, and amphibians? The summer class from Montessori Children's House went to Seashore State Park for a nature hike.

The day was hot and humid, but the children's spirits were high for their mile and a half walk. The tour guide led the children and parents down to a swampy area containing black water, cypress trees, and filmy moss.

Legends say Blackbeard may have hidden treasures in this area.

From there the trail climbed upwards, where turtles and a red bellied water snake were spotted. The children enjoyed seeing the Bicentennial "Grandfather" tree.

Just as legs and feet were tiring the hike ended at the Welcome Center and the children's minds turned towards home and the tales they would tell of the mysteries of Seashore State Park.

"Happy trails to you"

Roy Rogers, the singing cowboy, was in Virginia Beach Saturday evening to give a free outdoor concert with his band the Sons of the Pioneers. The event was staged to celebrate the opening of the new Roy Rogers Restaurant in Haygood. Thousands of Virginia Beach fans packed the restaurant parking lot and neighboring yards, eager to hear Rogers' cowboy tales and popular tunes. Photos by Pam Vandever.

Warning homeowners about noise zones...

Council, Navy and realtors join forces to protect buyers

Leo Cahill
Virginia Beach Sun Public Affairs Writer

Caveat emptor may still be the best rule to follow, but the city of Virginia Beach realtors and the Navy are beginning to think alike about letting the buyer also be informed.

City council Monday afternoon at an informal session reached no consensus on how this was to be accomplished, but city manager George L. Hanbury through it a good sign that the city, the Navy and the realtors all thought that something should be done.

Buyers often unaware

The problem arises when someone purchases or rents property in a noise or danger potential zone delineated by the AICUZ study. The buyer or renter is not always told about the noise or danger and usually complains to the Navy.

The Navy thinks the real estate broker should be required to present a disclosure statement which has to be signed by the prospective buyer at the time of the purchase agreement. This should prove that the buyer knows what he's getting into. Lcdr. S. L. Jackson believes the disclosure document should be mandatory.

The Virginia Beach Board of Realtors is opting for some kind of voluntary self-regulation by the realtors. F. Andrew Heatwole, chairman of the board's legislative committee, told council that the realtors would rely on the Virginia Real Estate Commission regulation which states that withholding from prospective purchasers any information readily available concerning the character or condition of the real estate...is grounds for suspension, revocation or denial of renewal of the individual's license.

Heatwole said that in the board's monthly newsletter a copy of the proposed map delineating the noise and hazard areas will be sent along with a proposed disclosure statement. The board will get an opinion from its lawyer, Heatwole said, on whether the mailing of information will make it "readily available."

The board is also trying to formulate an acceptable plan on the leasing of property.

A disclosure ordinance was suggested by Councilman F. Reid Ervin when he last served on council in 1974. The ordinance would make a disclosure statement mandatory.

Heatwole said that the realtors do not think that the zones set up by the Navy are finite enough and recommended a system of concentric circles. The concentric circles, Jackson said, would not work as well because they would necessarily include property which was neither in the noise or danger zones.

The AICUZ study delineates the noise and danger areas around the Naval Air Station at Oceana and the Fentress Airfield in Chesapeake which affects zones extending into Virginia Beach. Jackson said the Navy is also working on an AICUZ study for the Norfolk International Airport.

Heatwole suggested that if the voluntary system does not work, council could then consider legislation.

Hanbury said that, voluntary or mandatory, it may be the first time "that we have had acceptance of disclosure by signing a statement."

Since the Board of Realtors members handle 92 percent of the sales, most of the purchases would be covered. However, Heatwole pointed out that the Virginia Real Estate Commission covers all realtors.

Solving the problem

Ervin said that he didn't think anything was going to be accomplished with voluntary disclosure. He said that with the development of the General Booth Boulevard and Princess Anne Road, the problem would be intensified.

Ervin suggested that the buyers be told that information would be available at City Hall.

Although council discussed disclosure of other environmental problems, the noise and crash zones in the AICUZ study were considered the most important right now.

Ervin questioned the effectiveness of self-regulation.

Jackson said he couldn't understand why the realtors would object to the signing of a paper. He said it would protect both sides.

Heatwole said the Real Estate Board's remedies go farther than what was asked for. He said that the simplest solution would be for the city to erect signs saying, "You are entering a noise area."

Ervin stressed the importance of the Navy to the area and the protection of lives.

Heatwole pointed out that all FHA and VA financed insured property requires disclaimers.

Still apparently undecided, council will continue to study the merits of all the recommendations.

Battling it out during a four-round exhibition at the Dome last Thursday night were seventh ranked world heavyweight Duane Bobick and 40-year-old veteran boxer Speedy Jordan of Norfolk. # Wells will not be affected by study of desalinization

Leo Cahill
Virginia Beach Sun Public Affairs Writer

The production of private wells should not be affected by the use of wells by the city of Virginia Beach as a possible water source.

City manager George L. Hanbury assured a Beach citizen Monday afternoon that the city will not withdraw any water which will cause problems with riparian rights or the water yield of private wells. The effects on private wells will be one of the areas of study during testing programs of brackish and fresh groundwater wells approved by city council Monday afternoon.

Council appropriated $210,000 from the balance of the water and sewer fund for the development of specifications for brackish and fresh wells, schematic layout of the desalting facility, construction of brackish groundwater monitoring wells and testing of one existing fresh groundwater well field.

The program is expected to better the city's chances of acquiring a grant from the Office of Water Research and Technology of the United States Department of the Interior to finance a desalting demonstration utilizing brackish groundwater in Virginia Beach.

Conrad H. Reid expressed his concern to council that Back Bay was not being used for the testing which would save the city the expense of drilling a 1,500 foot well. He also questioned the effect of the city's well program on private wells.

City attorney Dale Bimson said that he had not looked into the riparian rights provisions in relation to the project, but Hanbury said these rights will be among the issues which will be resolved with the testing.

Reid pointed out that the engineering firm of Wiley & Wilson which is making a study of possible local water sources for Virginia Beach, pointed out that the consultants placed a $400,000 price tag on the desalting project in June and in August, the cost was up to $800,000 with $210,000 needed for monitoring wells for brackish water.

The city's plan is to use brackish water, mixed with water from freshwater wells, for desalinization to provide a water source for the city. The grant is expected to furnish the remaining part of the $800,000 for the desalting demonstration.

Reid asked why the brackish water in Back Bay couldn't be used for the experiment, thereby saving the expense of drilling a well.

Oberndorf appointed

Virginia Beach Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf was appointed by city council Monday afternoon to the executive committee of the Southeastern Planning District commission.

Meeting date changed

The Virginia Beach city council meeting scheduled for Sept. 4, Labor Day, has been changed to Sept. 5. Council will have its first night meeting under a policy adopted recently next Monday starting at 5:30 p.m. for the formal session and 7 p.m. for the formal session.

Duplex permits granted

Conditional use permits were granted Monday afternoon to Hudgins and Associates, Inc., for the construction of duplexes on three 7,000 square foot sites on the south side of 13th Street, west of Park Avenue, Virginia Beach Borough. City council approved the permits in concurrence with recommendations of the Planning Commission.

Council approves refund

Cape Henry Towers condominium was granted a $9,208.98 refund on units which were not substantially completed.

Virginia Beach city council approved the refund Monday afternoon by a vote of 9-1. Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf voted against approval because she was not satisfied that a single family home owner would be given the same consideration. Councilman John A. Baum was absent.

Real estate assessor C. N. Merritt said that in 1975 one builder was given a similar rebate on over 100 unsold single-family homes.

Low bidder gets contract

Luke Construction Company was awarded the contract for the North Virginia beach Sanitary Sewerage System, Contract III, Pump Stations 1, 2 and 3 for $441,600 compared to the engineer's estimate of $440,000. City council made the award to the low bidder Monday afternoon.

Service station passes

Virginia Beach city council Monday afternoon approved the application of Fine and Salzberg for a conditional use permit for an automobile service station on a .45 acre parcel on the south side of Indian River Road, west of Kempsville Road in the Kempsville Borough.

Contract goes to Gavco

Virginia Beach city council Monday afternoon awarded Gavco Corporation the contract for the construction of the Columbus Street Pump Station and Standpipe No. 2, Division I for $1,741,200 compared to the engineer's estimate of $1,495,250 and the Chicago Bridge & Iron Company the contract for the Division II for $587,150 compared to the engineer's estimate of $604,750.

High density apartment units approved for Rosemont area

Leo Cahill
Virginia Beach Sun Public Affairs Writer

A developer will be permitted to build 480 apartment units on a 20-acre site originally zoned to allow 120 units west of the proposed Rosemont Road extended, south of Holland Road in Kempsville.

By a vote of 6-4, Virginia Beach city council approved the application of Holland Associates for a change of zoning from R-8 Residential District to A-2 Apartment District on the site.

R.G. Moore is the developer of the property which is part of a project which includes 29 acres zoned A-1 for townhouses for sale; 12 acres O-1 for offices, and 162 acres for duplexes. The 20 acres will come out of the duplex acreage.

Gover Wright, attorney for Moore, said that the project will include 22 tennis courts, three swimming pools, three clubhouses and 7.3 acres of recreational areas.

Council Vice Mayor J. Henry McCoy said that "unless you're going to declare a building moratorium in Kempsville," he did not understand why the rezoning should not be granted. He pointed out that Holland Road is scheduled to be improved to a four-lane road and the new schools planned for the area could handle the new students generated.

Although water and sewer are not available, Wright said the developer plans to bring them into the area.

Bill Whiteside, executive director of the Green Run Home Owners Association, said that his basic concern was the traffic along Holland Road and the drainage problems.

Councilman F. Reid Ervin said that the zoning is premature because of the overcrowded schools and inadequate drainage. The drainage is poor now and by granting the rezoning, council would be asking for more trouble, he said.

Wright said that the developer is building a 175 foot canal and an eight acre lake, meeting city specifications.

Ervin reiterated that the city's specifications are inadequate.

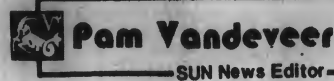

McCoy said there is a drainage problem all over the city.

An old friend sends a hello

Summertime is the popular season for those 10 and 20-year high school reunions, and although I haven't been personally involved in one of those formal affairs, I've heard a lot of talk about them lately in Virginia Beach.

But reunions occur in strange ways sometimes.

Pam Vandever
SUN News Editor

The local news recently told of an incident that happened to Kansas City Royals baseball player Pete LaCock, known not only for baseball, but for the fact that he's the son of actor Peter Marshall, host of TV's "Hollywood Squares."

Seems a gunman threatened to kill LaCock's nine months pregnant wife as they were leaving a club in Kansas City Saturday night.

Well, wouldn't you know that LaCock's wife, Janna, is an old sorority sister of mine whom I haven't seen since college days.

She was from a small town -- Parsons, Kansas, to be exact -- and I remember it caused quite a stir when a Holly star came to town for his son's wedding.

Now several years later and 1500 miles away, Janna and I meet again through the national news.

Unfortunately, it wasn't exactly the kind of news you like to hear. Fortunately, however, the gunman was captured, with no injury to my old schoolmate.

The world is so small sometimes. I just hope that next time I run into Janna, she'll have better news to tell.

Social Security Improves With Age

When the social security law was enacted in August 1935, all it provided for was monthly payments to certain workers to replace part of the earnings lost because of retirement. But in 1939, the law was changed so that certain dependents would also get monthly checks when the worker retired.

The first retirement check was issued in 1940 to Mrs. Ida Fuller...in the amount of $22.54. Today, the average monthly retirement payment is more than ten times that amount.

In the beginning, only workers in industry and commerce were protected by social security. Then, in the 1950's coverage was gradually extended to other workers and self-employed people, so that today, 9 out of 10 people are protected by social security.

What this means is that 9 out of 10 people can count on a certain measure of security when they retire...a social security check every month from the time they retire until they die.

But you should be encouraged to add to that protection with insurance or savings while you're working, so that when you do retire, there doesn't have to be a drastic change in your life style. Remember, social security was set up to replace only part of the earnings you lose when you retire. It's up to you to make up the difference if you don't want to be completely dependent on your monthly social security payments.

Included in the many changes that have been made in social security over the years are certain options you have with respect to retirement. When the social security law was passed, the age of retirement was set at 65. That doesn't hold true today. Now, you can retire as early as 62 if you've worked long enough under social security. If you do take an early retirement, your benefits will be at a reduced rate for as long as you get them. But it even itself out because you'll be getting payments over a longer period of time.

On the other hand, you may not even want to retire as early as 65...you might want to continue working into your 70's. Well, if that's your decision, and you don't receive retirement benefits, you'll get an extra one percent for each year between 62 and 72 that you could have been getting payments but didn't take them. In 1982, that one percent will be increased to 3 percent.

When you do retire, whether it be early retirement, retirement at 65, or delayed retirement, certain dependents of yours may also get monthly checks based on your earnings record. These dependents would include your husband or wife who is 62 or older; any unmarried children under 18, or 22 if they go to school full time; and any unmarried children 18 or older who were severely disabled before 22 and remain handicapped.

The amount of your monthly payments depends on your annual earnings over a period of years. Since the amount of earnings that count toward social security will increase each year for the next several years, this could mean higher benefits for you.

In addition, legislation was passed in 1972 to increase social security benefits automatically as the cost of living rises after your checks start. This, too, means increased payments for you.

Whitehurst questionnaire reveals Beach opinions

Congressman Bill Whitehurst has released the results of his most recent questionnaire which called on all residents of the Second District to voice their opinion on several major topics.

Of the 170 thousand distributed by mail in Virginia Beach and Norfolk, approximately 10 thousand have been returned to the Washington office during the past six weeks.

In some cases, not all questions were answered or multiple answers were recorded. This resulted in figures both over and under 100%.

Whitehurst remarked, "The clearest message we see in this questionnaire is that voters regard inflation as our number one problem and deficit spending by the U.S. Government as the major culprit. I am certainly inclined to share their philosophy."

A majority of those responding to the questionnaire listed inflation, deficit spending, and over regulation by the government as the three biggest problems facing the United States.

Congressman Whitehurst's questionnaire results:

Machine honors are out of time

The students are on the dean's list three years too late. It's just another minor technological mix-up.

VPI, it seems, programmed the computer to put out a list of students on the spring quarter dean's list.

The years, unfortunately, did not go in, so the computer ran the job for five years back.

Since everyone accepts the basic fact of human error, most folks probably won't be too upset to see their children and friends recognized once again, even if they haven't seen the hallowed halls for a couple of years.

Rhonda Miller
SUN Staff Writer

One parent called up amazed to see her daughter's name, since she was now a Mrs. someone else and had been teaching school for three years.

Not to be dismayed.

VPI has taken it in stride, is aware of the mistake, and is now sending out apologies.

All the more reason to believe that machines are not going to take over the world.

To err is human, but computers have moments

There is a sign next to the computer terminal in Virginia Tech's engineering building, Norris Hall, that reads:

"To err is human; to really foul things up requires a computer."

The Information Office at Virginia Tech couldn't agree more.

After years of compiling the steadily-growing Tech Dean's List manually, the Information Office decided it had had enough.

It decided to go the modern way, the way of the future--the way of the computer.

And even that wasn't easy.

It took months of work, of checking and re-checking and even triple-checking.

It took money.

But finally, everything was set.

The 1978 spring quarter Dean's List was going out via computer.

The Information Office management and staff looked forward to the saved time and assured accuracy.

The state newspapers looked forward to a Dean's List naming only those students in their area, instead of the nation-wide Dean's List they usually received.

Things looked good, very good.

No one thought it terribly strange that the lists were unusually large.

"Grade inflation," everyone thought, shaking their heads.

No one noticed that the names of people who had long since graduated were on the list.

No one noticed that, because of a program error, the computer very neatly had printed all the Tech students who made the Dean's List since 1975.

At last, no one notice until newspapers printed the lists.

Then Tech alumni began to respond.

Kenneth H. Haines, Tech's director of public information, said the Information Office had received several letters from alumni thanking the school for remembering them but asking Tech to check their records "a little more carefully."

Haines said he also received letters from numerous newspapers complimenting Tech's new system.

It's just one of those things," Haines said. "The computer people didn't catch it, our office didn't catch it and most newspapers didn't catch it."

Haines said the Information Office would continue to use the computer system for the Dean's List, but would check the computer's work more carefully in the future.

Zoning

Councilman Donald Merrick and Councilwomen Barbara Henley and Meyera Oberndorf. The Planning Commission had recommended approval and the staff, denial.

Request denied

Another request for higher density zoning in Kempsville was denied by the ten members present. Councilman John A. Baun was absent.

Denied was the application of George C. Hunt for a change of zoning from R-5 Residential District to R-8 Residential District on a 10.7 acre parcel on the north side of Parliament Drive, west of Yoder Lane, Kempsville Borough.

McCoy said that there were no plans to widen Parliament Drive.

The planning Commission recommended approval while the staff recommended denial.

Timothy Lewis, representing home owners in the area, presented a petition containing names of 100 home owners and registered taxpayers who opposed the application.

Their reasons:

The zoning, which would permit 64 duplex units while existing zoning permits 32 single-family homes, is not in keeping with the neighborhood.

Duplexes lend themselves to investment property and high density.

Concern with overcrowding schools and roads.

The developer is the only one in favor and his purchase agreement, Lewis said, is based on the contingency that the property is rezoned.

Spot zoning.

Attorney Grover Wright, representing the applicant, said that the developer will have to go under the railroad tracks and acquire easements from Vepco for the drainage, which will make the project costly. Therefore, the lower density development is not economically feasible.

Application approved

In another Kempsville rezoning application council approved by a vote of 7-3 the petition of William E. Wood for a change of zoning from R-8 Residential District to O-1 Office District on a 8.6 acre parcel on the north side of Kempsville Road, west of Brandon Boulevard.

Wood said the single-family home on the property will be converted for use as his office.

McCoy voted against the application because a similar application across the road was recently denied, he said. Also voting against the rezoning were Councilwomen Barbara Henley and Meyera Oberndorf. Councilman John A. Baun was absent and the remaining council members voted for approval.

The Planning Commission recommended approval while the staff recommended denial.

Water study

Hanbury said the Bay had been considered but was too likely to be contaminated from the farmland and chemical runoff and the total dissolved solids would be too high (10,000 parts per million) for drinking water which requires a limit of 1,000 parts per million.

He noted that Back Bay was also in North Carolina, which has not been agreeable to having water withdrawn for use in Virginia.

Hanbury also pointed out that if the test well were well-located, it could be used for actual production and eventually could be expanded from the initial two million gallons per day to 20, 30 or 40 million gallons a day.

Council probes question of illegal building

Leo Cahill
Virginia Beach Sun Public Affairs Writer

How the Virginia Beach Racquet club got to build a 47-foot high structure in a residential neighborhood, is a cock robin type of story. Just as there was no one around to take the responsibility for killing cock robin, no one and everyone seems to be at fault for allowing the tennis court shelter to be built.

The height limit for a structure in a residential neighborhood is 30 feet. The Racquet Club has a 47-foot structure over six tennis courts. Last week city council wanted to know why the building permit was issued.

At an informal meeting of council Monday afternoon, city manager George L. Hanbury disclosed a story of mistaken intentions.

On March 31 of last year, council amended the Comprehensive Zoning Ordinance to allow an enclosure of a temporary or seasonal nature for recreational activities in a residential zone through a use permit procedure.

The amendment permits the applicant to by-pass the Planning Commission and go directly to city council which is what Dr. Harvey H. Shiflet did on June 20, 1977.

Hanbury said that although Shiflet filed plans for the 47-foot enclosure he planned to build, there is nothing in the minutes to suggest that any questions were asked about the height or the design of the structure.

Since council approved Shiflet's application, Hanbury said, Building Inspector Robert Lohr issued a building permit although the height was in violation of the city's building code.

"I don't think anybody made a malicious oversight," Hanbury said, and added that he thought the area residents objected to the appearance of the structure more than its height.

There is also some confusion about the temporary nature of the building. The building is up all year, but during the summer the sides are rolled up.

Councilman Donald Merrick said, "We've just got an illegal building."

Vice Mayor J. Henry McCoy Jr., said that "passing the buck back and forth between council and staff" is a poor way to operate.

Hanbury said that since the owner received a building permit for the structure, the city can't have it removed.

Last week the Racquet Club was allowed to withdraw an application for a use permit to build additional partially-enclosed courts, indoor handball and racquet courts and a clubhouse with restaurant.

Council turns down business rezoning

Leo Cahill
Virginia Beach Sun Public Affairs Writer

Concurring with the Planning Commission, Virginia Beach city council turned down an application to rezone a corner parcel in a residential area to permit business uses.

Harry D. and Mabel B. Church applied for a change of zoning from R-8 Residential District to B-2 Community Business District on a .35-acre parcel at the southwest intersection of Potters Road and London Bridge Road, Lynnhaven Borough.

A single-family home currently exists on the site while existing zoning allows two duplex units. The proposed zoning would allow a variety of commercial establishments.

Councilman Donald Merrick noted the neighborhood was basically residential, and "we" don't want a 7-22 store there."

Herbert Smith, who owns property zoned for business across the street, supported the application, but council unanimously denied the petition.

Therapeutic swimming Olympics event planned

The concluding event of the Summer Therapeutic Recreation Swimming Program will be a Swimming Olympic program held at the Virginia Beach Recreation Center pool August 26 from 9 a.m.-12 noon.

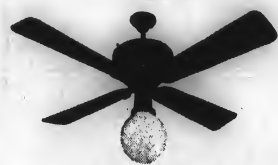

Participating in this program will be children from the summer therapeutic recreation swimming program. This program teaches handicapped youngsters basic water skills with the emphasis being on drown-proofing techniques.

All children are taught on a one to one basis by staff members and volunteer staff. This program has been widely accepted by the handicapped population in Virginia Beach.

For further information contact the Therapeutic Recreation staff at the Virginia Beach Recreation Center, 800 Monmouth Lane or call 499-1281.

Those marching formations you see during winter football games don't come easy. Princess Anne High School marching band members begin practicing those drills while the summer heat is still strong.

Report cards loom in future

Report cards for Virginia Beach elementary students will be issued four times during the 1978-79 school year, and secondary students will receive their report cards six times during the year.

Formal reports of the scholastic performance of elementary students (grades one through seven) will be issued Nov. 13, 1978, and Feb. 5, Apr. 16, and June 14, 1979. In addition, informal progress reports for students in grades four through seven who are performing below their expected level will be issued Oct. 4, and Dec. 14, 1978, and Mar. 5, and May 10, 1979.

The progress of secondary students, grades seven through twelve, will be noted in six 30-day (approximately) reporting periods. Cards will be issued Oct. 27, and Dec. 15, 1978, and Feb. 9, Mar. 23, May 11, and June 14, 1979, the last scheduled day of school.

Time to enroll in Beach schools

New students to the Virginia Beach school system or those transferring within the city should enroll as soon as possible at the elementary, junior high or senior high school to which their neighborhood is assigned. Except in rare cases this is usually the school nearest the student's residence.

The Pupil Personnel Office (447-4771) has a complete listing of all school attendance zones and can answer questions about specific neighborhood assignments.

A birth certificate or the equivalent is required at the time of enrollment in the first grade or kindergarten if the enrollment is the child's first public school admission.

A student transferring into the Virginia Beach public schools from another system in Virginia must have a transfer certificate from the last school of attendance.

Scholastic records from a previous school are desirable for all transfer students to aid in immediate placement. An official transcript will then be requested by the Virginia Beach school.

Buses travel 15,000 miles a day

Transportation to and from school is provided free of charge for all Virginia Beach public school students who live more than a mile from their school.

To accomplish the task of moving more than 50,000 students to and from school each day, the Virginia Beach Public Schools Transportation Department relies on a well-trained crew of 400 drivers, including substitutes, using a fleet of 385 modern buses. These buses and drivers log a total of more than 15,000 miles each school day, an average of 41 miles a day per bus.

Each person selected as a bus driver for Virginia Beach schools undergoes extensive training, both on the road and in the classroom. The drivers receive instruction in bus discipline and road courtesy, as well as in the driving skills necessary to operate the large buses. The average driver of a Virginia Beach school bus has more than seven and a half years experience, but many have more than 20 years service.

Backing up the drivers is a staff of experienced maintenance men and women, plus large, modern repair facilities which enable time to handle any phase of bus repair or upkeep, from changing an engine to painting the exterior.

More than 1,400 school bus routes link the neighborhoods of the city with its public schools. Each route is carefully planned by the bus driver, school officials and the transportation department to make sure the students are safely delivered to and from school in the shortest possible time.

Included in the school fleet are specially designed and equipped buses for transporting students who have physical and mental handicaps which make it impractical for them to ride a regular school bus. The drivers of these smaller vehicles receive special training, particularly in loading and unloading of these students.

In addition, some regular buses which transport the more mobile handicapped students have driver aides to provide constant attention and care while the bus is in motion.

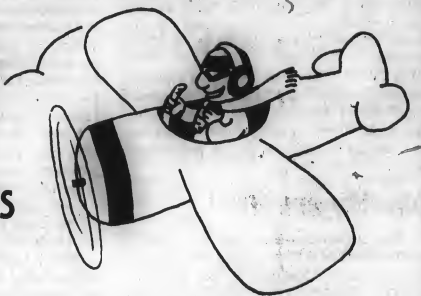

Teen dance is Aug. 26

The teen services program at the Virginia Beach Recreation Center will be featuring "Fever" in conjunction with Whisper Concerts at their upcoming teen dance August 26.

The dance will begin at 8 p.m., and continue until 11 p.m. in room 116-118 with Virginia Beach Recreation Center ID card holders admitted free and guests of members for $5.00.

For further information contact the Virginia Beach Recreation Center, 800 Monmouth Lane or call 499-1281.

Physicals necessary for Beach students

All elementary students transferring from out-of-state into a Virginia Beach school for the first time must show proof of having received a complete physical examination within the 12 months preceding the enrollment.

Physical-exam forms are available at the office of each school. If the physical exam cannot be completed prior to the beginning of attendance, the child may be enrolled on a conditional basis if the parent or guardian presents written proof of a scheduled medical appointment for the exam.

Proof of immunization against diphtheria, pertussis (whooping cough), tetanus, polio, rubella (measles) and rubella (German measles) is also required of any elementary student entering a Virginia Beach school for the first time.

Parents or guardians are urged to begin early to ensure that all immunizations are completed prior to the beginning of school attendance.

School physical examinations are offered to new students and new teachers who are military dependents at the Norfolk Naval Base Dispensary by appointment only on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings.

Require X-Rays for new teachers can also be taken at Boone Clinic at the Naval Amphibious Base, Little Creek, but Boone Clinic cannot accommodate teacher or student physical exams. Immunizations are offered to military dependents at the Norfolk Naval Base Dispensary and at Boone Clinic.

In addition, the Virginia Beach Health Department is offering free immunization clinics to help all children entering the city's public schools this fall complete their basic immunizations.

In a letter to school superintendent Dr. E.E. Brickell this summer, city health department director Dr. George C. Sjolund said the free clinics will help the children and the public schools meet these requirements.

The free clinics are located at the Princess Anne Municipal Center, along the beach front at 19th and Arctic Ave., and in the Pembroke area at 930 Independence Boulevard.

Scheduled hours of the clinics for immunizations are: Municipal Center, Wednesdays, 8:30-10 a.m.; 19th & Arctic Ave., Tuesdays, 8:30-11 a.m.; and 930 Independence Blvd., Fridays, 8:30-10 a.m. No appointments are necessary.

School attendance required by law

ATTENDANCE LAW

For the 1978-79 school year Virginia state law requires all children who have reached their fifth birthday on or before January 1 of the school year which began the preceding September, and who have not passed their seventeenth birthday, to attend a public, private, denominational or parochial school.

For the 1979-80 school year the law has been amended to provide that children must reach their fifth birthday on or before December 1. (State Code 22.275.1)

KINDERGARTEN

The Virginia Beach public schools offer free half-day kindergarten classes for five-year-olds in each elementary school. Some children are assigned to morning sessions, and others attend afternoon classes. Free transportation by school buses is provided for both sessions.

While kindergarten attendance is not mandatory under special circumstances, it is highly encouraged. The school system should be notified when the child is not to attend.

FIRST GRADE

To be eligible for enrollment in the first grade for the 1978-79 school year regardless of whether the child has attended kindergarten, the sixth birthday must be reached by January 1 of the school year which began the previous September.

For the 1979-80 school year, the sixth birthday must be reached by December 1, because of a change in Virginia Law.

Pre-school book sale gives student head start

Virginia Beach secondary students who receive their 1978-79 class schedule may purchase their textbooks at a special pre-school book sale at their junior or senior high school Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, August 23, 24, and 25.

Sale hours will be from 9 a.m. to noon all three days and, additionally, from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Wednesday, August 23.

Secondary student class schedules were released August 16. Some secondary courses will require materials in addition to or in lieu of textbooks, for which a fee is charged.

Two junior high schools — Independence and Plaza — will offer students the opportunity to pay these fees during the hours of the August book sale. Other secondary schools send information on materials charges to the students' homes with copies of their class schedules.

The seventh grade students attending junior highs will have the option of renting or purchasing their textbooks, the same as the seventh graders attending elementary schools, however, the rental fees do not cover instructional materials fees for such elective courses as band, chorus, art and industrial arts.

Secondary students who are certified as indigent or foster children may be qualified to receive their textbooks on a loan basis without charge. Please inquire about the textbook fee waiver at each junior and senior high school office.

Put together a back to school wardrobe

Are you planning a "Back to School" wardrobe? To help you to put together your child's wardrobe and to stretch your clothing dollars, the Virginia Beach Department of Agriculture/VP Extension Services will conduct a program on "Child Style '78".

This children's fashion show will be held on Wednesday, August 30, from 7 - 8:30 p.m. at the Virginia Beach Recreation Center, 800 Monmouth Drive.

"Child Style '78" will present the latest styles for this fall including the "Annie Hall" dress, bib front jumpers and three piece suits.

Helpful tips will be given on selecting and purchasing clothing which meets with the demands, tastes and needs of your children and still stays within your budget.

To register for the fashion show or for additional information, contact the Virginia Beach Department of Agriculture/VP Extension Services at 427-4611.

To buy or rent... parents must decide

For the 1978-79 school year, the Virginia Beach Public Schools provides parents the choice of either renting or buying textbooks for their elementary school children in kindergarten through the seventh grade.

Based on the material costs at the various grade levels, the textbook rental fees for the 1978-79 school year are:

- $ 5 - Kindergarten;
- $ 8 - Grades 1 & 2;
- $ 9 - Grades 3, 4, & 5;
- $10 - Grades 6 & 7.

Details of the textbook rental plans will be sent home with the students on the first day of school. The textbook rental rates will be prorated for students entering school after December 1, 1978. For those students who withdraw from school, textbook rental refunds will be prorated based on the withdrawal date.

Parents who wish to purchase their children's textbooks may obtain order forms and information at any elementary school office.

Elementary students who are certified as indigent or foster children may be entitled to a waiver on textbook rental or special education fees. Inquire about the waivers at any elementary school office.

Jordan challenges Bobick, Brown wins Virginia title

Pam Vanderveer
Virginia Beach Sun News Editor

Seventh ranked world heavyweight Duane Bobick locked horns with 40-year-old Norfolk boxer Speedy Jordan in a four-round exhibition at the Dome last Thursday night. The event sparked the possibility of a fight on the Sept. 14 card.

Immediately following the exhibition Jordan took the microphone in the ring and challenged Bobick to a fight in September.

Both boxers accused each other of undue aggressiveness during the bout. What was supposed to have been a friendly sparring session saw Bobick leave the ring with a bruised, swollen face and Jordan a black eye.

Bobick's manager Dave Wolf was visibly irritated with the turn of events and accepted Jordan's challenge of a future match.

Boxing promoter Ed Owens said the fight would probably take place on either the Sept. 14 or Oct. 19 card.

Brown's pro record now stands at 11-2.

The scheduled Virginia heavyweight title bout between Leroy Boone and Bobby Jordan didn't come off. An eye examination that afternoon revealed that Jordan has cataracts in both eyes.

In the evening's remaining fights, Brad Crane of Norfolk knocked out 180-pound John Beveridge of West Virginia in his first local appearance.

A six-round welterweight match between Van Tate of Virginia Beach and Julius Spell of Norfolk saw Tate as the winner.

No go cart track in agricultural area

Lee Cahill
Virginia Beach Sun Public Affairs Writer

Attorney Sam Scott flipped on his tape recorder to let Virginia Beach city council members listen to the strains of a less noisy type engine — the kind that would be used on the go cart track his client was planning to build.

But the majority of council must have figured the sounds were still noisy enough to be unsuitable for the agricultural site in Princess Anne County. By a vote of 6-4, council denied the petition of the Winner Corporation for a conditional use permit for a recreational facility of an outdoor nature (go cart track) on a three-acre parcel on the east side of Holland Road, south of North Landstown Road.

Smith, who said he was retained by the applicant after the hearing before the Planning Commission which recommended denial of the application, had done his homework, but it wasn't enough. He said that the go cart track would be near a driving range and mini golf course, and that Council on June 20, 1977 approved a skateboard park nearby on part of the property.

He said that there were few homes in the area and that the applicant had done a lot of research and planned to use an engine which was much more quiet than the usual go cart variety. He played the tapes to prove it. He also pointed out that the noise from the Navy planes was greater than the go carts would produce.

He added that the Navy recommended that land uses be of a limited recreational nature, because the property lies within a noise zone.

Councilman J. Curtis Payne said the property just a half mile away will soon be developed into residential use and felt that a go cart track didn't fit in.

Voting for denial were Councilmen Donald S. Merrick, George R. Ferrell, J. Curtis Payne, Mayor Patrick L. Standing and Councilwomen Meyera Oberdorf and Barbara Henley. Voting against denial were Councilmen F. Reid Ervin, Clarence A. Holland, and R. L. Riggs, and Vice Mayor J. Henry McCoy Jr. Councilman John A. Baum was absent.

HAY FEVER

"Hay fever" is actually a medical misnomer since it has nothing to do with either hay or fever. According to a pamphlet issued by Abbott Laboratories, it is quite simply an allergy developed by people with a heightened sensitivity to certain substances called allergens that are inhaled, swallowed, touched or injected into the body.

RAGWEED OCCURS IN VARYING DEGREES OF DENSITY throughout most of the United States

The meesin' season is no laughing matter to the millions of Americans who suffer from hay fever. They sufferers react to some 250,000 tons of ragweed pollen that nature dumps into the air from late summer through early fall.

Fortunately, there are a number of things the pamphlet suggests you can do if you have hay fever:

1. Ask your doctor about receiving pollen "desensitization" treatment. It may relieve symptoms when pollen starts flying.

2. Ask your doctor if he thinks drugs, such as antihistamines, might help relieve your symptoms.

3. Stay indoors with air conditioning. This helps late you from pollen in the air outside.

4. Take a vacation where ragweed is scarce or nonexistent.

To obtain a free copy of the pamphlet "Hay Fever, Holiday," which lists the best refuges from ragweed in their United States, send a stamped, self-addressed business envelope to "Hay Fever," Dept. 383NA, Abbott Laboratories, Abbott Park, North Chicago, Ill. 60064.

Health Views

THE SUGAR-COATED SECURITY BLANKET

Do you like sugar because you've got a "sweet tooth" or because during the early part of your life you were trained to love it?

According to health authorities, many of our eating habits are not so much a preference as they are an addiction-mental as well as physical. This is especially true of eating sweets.

If we look at it from a psychological basis, modern society often displays love and recognition to a child through sweets. The infant's pacifier is often sweetened to keep him from crying; the child is often given candy as a reward; even the grown-up is shown affection by a box of candy or a cake. And so sweets often become a security food-subconsciously satisfying the desire for approval.

Elderly people, when surveyed, indicate their favorite food is "beans." This might seem to be a contradiction to the security food theory until one studies the era when these people were brought up. Those were the days of the depression when people could seldom afford the luxury of sweets. Every dollar was put into staple foods, and there was nothing more staple than low-cost filling foods like bread, potatoes and beans. Among the three, beans was a treat. And thus it became the reward. Incidentally, that's why most older people can't understand the tastes of our generation with its concentration on the high use of sugar. That's also why most people tend to favor foods that taste just like "what mother used to make."

The motivation in both cases is the same-security. In the first case, it's a psychological crutch with sweets. And it's going to be harder to break than even the cigarette habit. But it's well worth doing... for the sake of your health.

If you were born during the last 30 years, let's face it, you've got an addiction, a habit, a psychological crutch with sweets. And it's going to be harder to break than even the cigarette habit. But it's well worth doing... for the sake of your health.

Surfing material available

In preparation for the East Coast Surfing Championship this year, the Virginia Beach public library wants to remind you of the material available in the library on surfing.

Library materials can show you how to be a safe surfer while learning to enjoy this great outdoor activity. So, the next time the surf isn't up, stop by the library to prepare for that next perfect wave.

Rec center sponsors swim league

The Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation is sponsoring a swim league from September until April at the Virginia Beach Recreation Center.

The swim league is for boys and girls 8-16 years old. The boys program will be from September to December and the girls program, from December until April.

Registration for the boys will continue through August 31 at the administration office of the recreation center. The parents of the boys are asked to attend a parent's meeting on September 9 at 10 a.m.

Practice starts September 16 and the meets continue from October until December.

"Everyman" to be staged at rec center

The performing arts unit of the Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation announces the production of "Everyman" at the Recreation Center Theatre, August 23 through 26 at 8 p.m. and August 27 at 3 p.m.

"Everyman" is a medieval spectacle depicting any man's struggle with concepts of the brevity of life, the vanity of the world and the sense of living under the shadow of death. The rough verse language and primitive stage conventions of the play make it a true classic of the English Theatre.

The incidental music for this production has been composed and orchestrated by Fred Strong, young founder of the Archive of Virginia Composers, assisted by David Russell and Trish Braswell.

Five musical pieces have been created for the production.

First is the overall God-life-death theme, seen by composer Strong as man's cry for understanding of the eternal.

Next, the lighthearted Everyman theme, contributed by Russell, gives a feeling of the quest or journey undertaken by every man. Strong has created the next two pieces, a rejection theme and a medieval dance for the Good Deeds.

Trish Braswell has composed the show's theme song, "I'm You," which is performed by Everyman's Beauty, Strength, Discretion and Five Wits.

The production is performed by the New Playmakers Company and promises to be a stimulating retelling of the oldest of stories.

Admission to the production is free, but reservations are necessary and may be made by calling 499-1283.

Skateboard competition is August 24

Youngsters between the ages of six and 12 years of age are invited to participate in skateboard competition on August 24 at the skateboard bowl in Mt. Trashmore Park.

Competition will begin at 9 a.m. Skateboarders will compete in bowl runs and slalom runs.

No fee is required, helmets and knee pads will be furnished, youngsters need only supply their skateboards. Pre-registration is necessary and can be obtained in the teen lounge of the V.B.R.C.

For further information contact the teen lounge at the Virginia Beach Recreation Center, 800 Monmouth Lane or call 499-1281.

Residents oppose rezoning

Booth Boulevard growth stymied by city council

Leo Cahill
Virginia Beach Sun Public Affairs Writer

High density rezoning petitions for 386.20 acres in the General Booth Boulevard growth corridor were denied by Virginia Beach city council Monday afternoon.

The main consideration leading to the denial was the absence of a comprehensive land use plan for the area. This is expected to be available in six to nine months, according to city planner Robert Scott.

The developer also was objected to two conditions of the rezoning requests if they were approved -- to design and construct one-half of the ultimate highway section for False Cape Parkway which runs through the property and to provide a 160-foot drainage easement for the north-south canal.

Lakeside Construction Corporation applied for rezoning of the property located east of Oceana Boulevard and north of both Princess Anne Road and Sandbridge Road in the Princess Anne Borough. W. W. Reakor is a principal of the firm.

The proposed zoning would allow 1,164 single-family homes, 148 townhouses and commercial development in an area where 312 single-family homes and commercial development are now permitted.

In a unanimous vote by the 10 members present, council concurred with the recommendation of the Planning Commission. The city administration, however, recommended approval of the petitions except rezoning from R-4 to R-5 was sought.

Since most of the lots in Lagomar are larger than the 15,000 square-foot minimum in an R-4 district, the city recommended the R-4 classification, rather than the higher-density R-5, remain as a buffer between Lagomar and the proposed development.

The administration, however, stated with its recommendation that the most important requirement involves participation by the developer in construction of False Cape Parkway. "Without this requirement the level of adequacy of surrounding roads is not sufficient to warrant approval of these petitions," according to administration comments.

Approximately 60 persons from the Lagomar, Back Bay and Sandbridge areas opposed the rezonings Monday. They were interested in retaining the rural nature of the area and were concerned about inadequacy of services including roads, schools, water, sewer and drainage.

Grover Wright, attorney representing the applicant, said that it was "questionable whether it (the property) can be retained in agricultural use."

The proposed rezonings reduce 191.4 acres of business-zoned property to 26.8 acres and 32 acres have been set aside for school and park use. The 32 acres would bring the total acreage to 418.2 acres, he said, which would meet the density of 3.24 dwelling units per acre recommended in the General Booth Corridor Study completed in November 1977.

The development which is located between Bayshore on the north and Lagomar on the south, he said, would be developed compatible with Lagomar where developers have proposed 300 acres be rezoned from R-

Alan Fullmer of the Lagomar Civic League said the 300 acres will be used for a golf course.

Wright said that the Lakeside development will be not an isolated development in the area and listed the Continued on page 2

Increased dumping forces tighter landfill control

Leo Cahill
Virginia Beach Sun Public Affairs Writer

Excessive use of the Virginia Beach landfill has forced the city to consider placing restrictions on users.

At present the landfill is open to residents and non-residents. There is no charge for dumping from vehicles with city decals. Those without decals are charged $3.12 a ton, a fee which was adopted in 1968.

Outside haulers, who collect refuse in the city, now pay the equivalent of personal property tax as a fee for dumping privileges because the hauler cannot be required to pay a personal property tax in more than one jurisdiction.

City manager George L. Hanbury has proposed an increase in the fee and tighter control to cut down dumping from outside the city.

He said that the landfill was designed to last 20 years, but has already been operating for five years. An increase in dumping during the past three or four months, he said, will shorten the life of the landfill four or five years.

The problem started when Norfolk closed its Campostella landfill in March and refuse from Norfolk was dumped in the Virginia Beach landfill. Hanbury said that the city should adopt the policies of other cities which do not allow outside dumping.

He said that he would have an ordinance prepared for Council but that he would not recommend its implementation until Jan. 1 to give haulers a chance to make new contracts.

Before Norfolk closed its Campostella dump, 288,000 tons a year were dumped at the Beach landfill including 45 percent local, 45 percent private haulers and 10 percent out of town refuse.

After the Norfolk landfill was closed, the Beach landfill experienced an increase of 250 to 65,000 tons a month, bringing the out of town percentage of dumped material to 20 percent.

Hanbury proposes:

There will be no charge for residents dumping from a vehicle no larger than a half-ton pickup truck.

Any larger vehicle with a Virginia Beach decal will be charged $3.50 a ton.

Vehicles with no decal will be permitted to dump at the same price but only after receiving a permit from the director of Public Works. In lieu of a decal, the user will be asked to show contracts or proof that he is serving Virginia Beach. The permit will be issued for a period of six or 12 months with an accompanying sticker.

Council studies streets

The Virginia Beach city council will meet in informal session at 11 a.m. Sept. 11 to hear a report on the master street and highway and plan the bicycle path plan.

Parimutuel betting update

Mayor Patrick L. Standing Monday afternoon requested the Virginia Beach Development Council to update a report previously made on parimutuel betting. He said that he is interested in the stand of the people of Virginia Beach on parimutuel betting.

Volleyball at the Beach

From 250 to 300 people will participate in the East Coast Volleyball Championship which starts Saturday at 10 a.m. along the resort strip at the beach.

Brian G. Flora told council Monday afternoon that of the players 50 will be local and the remainder out-of-towners.

Eighteen courts will be set up on the beach with the parks and Recreation Department furnishing additional nets and trash cans. Prizes totalling $1500 will be awarded, he said.

A dinner will be held Sunday at the Fort Story Officers Club.

Residents earn citations

Councilman Reid Ervin has suggested the award of special citations for Virginia Beach residents, especially those who serve on commissions, with a special citation for residents who have reached advanced years.

Beach access blocked

A number of people living in the north end of Virginia Beach have taken over street ends and right of ways and blocked access to the beach. Although the people have improved the appearance of the property they have made beach access difficult for Kenneth Brown, who is handicapped and uses a Honda vehicle to get to the beach.

Ervin asked the city to remove the offending structures.

Virginia Beach.

A fast moving city of fun, sun and excitement where new faces move in and out like waves on the beach.

The summer season in Virginia Beach is marked by the thousands of people who flock here to enjoy the beaches and the nightlife. Some stay a few days, others stay a few weeks as they relax and enjoy their vacations.

But what about those people who live and work at the beach the entire summer? Those unfamiliar faces that local residents must meet at the beginning of the summer who seem to leave just when they become familiar. Where did they come from, where did they go and why did they ever come?

Since this reporter also happens to be a summer resident it wasn't too difficult to find people to interview. In fact, in the apartment house where my roommates and I lived, there was a total of 18 girls divided up into four, eight bedroom apartments.

No news today Virginia Beach Sun

Come rain or snow, sleet or hail the mail must go through — mustn't it? Mother nature may not be able to stop mail service, but angry postal workers can, we've learned recently.

Here in Virginia Beach the threat of a mail strike has had us wondering. But it looks like I can now feel reasonably assured that my car insurance payment will reach the company before the cancellation date, my unwanted book club selections will continue to enter my mailbox, and VEPCO bills will still arrive to brighten my days.

Pam Vandever
SUN News Editor

Not that I've always been thrilled with the postal system. At my last address, four houses on my street had the same house number. Despite complaints, I continued to receive mail for eight different people up until the day I moved.

They say "no news is good news," and that was certainly true in that case. But a mail strike probably wouldn't be such good news.

When it comes down to stating a preference, I'd rather get mail for eight people than none at all.

Landfill control

charges $13.50 a ton at the landfill and $5.50 a ton for the incinerator; Chesapeake charges $3 a ton, at the landfill, and Portsmouth charges $3 a ton and $5.50 for the incinerator.

Hanbury said that very few private residents use the landfill.

Councilman George R. Ferrell said that he was in favor of control but was afraid that the restrictions will cause people to dump trash in the ditches.

Ferrell said that Virginia Beach apartment projects which haul their own refuse to the landfill may start putting trash out for the city to pick up if they have to pay a fee.

Hanbury said that private haulers pick up half of the 300,000 tons dumped at the landfill each year.

Mayor Patrick L. Standing said that the city will have to use some discretion. He pointed out that private haulers may pick up trash in Norfolk as well as Virginia Beach.

Hanbury said that it was "amazing how we were getting all the Norfolk Redevelopment and Housing Authority (trash). He said the $3.50-a-ton fee will just about recover the cost of the operation for the city.

The 300,000 tons of trash at the landfill, Hanbury pointed out, amounts to about 1,000 a ton for every Beach resident.

J. Curtis Payne suggested the administration contact private haulers before preparing the ordinance and to get their input.

Hanbury said that Norfolk may even be forced to close its Lamberts point Landfill to meet environmental requirements. In that case, he said, "we should have a contract."

Although the regional garbage to energy plan (Resource Recovery Project) will solve some of the garbage problems, Hanbury pointed out that the Virginia Beach landfill is expected to be used in that plan, too, as an area landfill.

Grass seed recommended

The Virginia Beach Department of Agriculture/VPI Extension Horticulturist recommends purchasing Virginia-Maryland Certified grass seed.

Such seed will contain fewer weed and other crop seed contaminants and will be free of unwanted inert filler. Kentucky 31 Tall Fescue should have a minimum purity of 98% and 80% germination.

projected R & J development of 137 acres; Nottingham Burns, 112 acres; Taylor Estate properties, and the Malbon Property at London Bridge and Oceana Boulevards.

Councilman J. Curtis Payne said that the roads and schools are the crux of the matter. "Even if we rezoned we would not have access from False Cape Parkway to Oceana Boulevard."

Wright maintained the project did not need False Cape Parkway and would have sufficient access from General Booth Boulevard.

False Cape Parkway, which originates from False Cape Park south of Sandbridge, is included on the master street and highway plan for the city but has not been constructed. Developers are generally expected to design and pave half of a city street which runs through or along their subdivisions.

Wright said that False Cape Parkway requires of the developer a dedication of 12.5 acres of land while the cost of construction of two lands of the projected four-lane road would come to $1,350,000 to lay "to lay on one developer."

Wright also maintained that the canal easement for a 160-foot wide canal was not necessary, and would require 16 acres.

Payne said that "I don't think we could approve this unless False Cape Parkway were taken to the site." As for the canal, he said that even a 40-foot canal needs an easement 80 feet and that doesn't provide for spoil or maintenance.

A large tract adjoining the property was zoned B-2 in 1964 to accommodate a car raceway which never materialized. With the Lakeside B-2 proposal, 345 acres would be zoned B-2, Councilwoman Barbara Henley pointed out. Most of the areas zoned B-2 are being farmed. In about half of the entire tract under the proposal is farmed and the rest is wooded.

B-2 zoning would generate three times the traffic as the residential construction proposed, Wright said.

Payne said the property isn't going to be developed B-2.

Councilman Reid Ervin said that False Cape Parkway is like Old Donation Parkway, "Everybody wants it and nobody wants to pay for it."

Scott said the city has received dedications for the road in the area except through Lagomar. In the stretch between Oceana Boulevard and Princess Anne Road, not much right of way has been acquired.

City manager George L. Hanbury said that the concept for the road was that it would be built by developers, and would not be a responsibility of the city. The parkway is not included in the current five-year Capital Improvement Plan.

Fuller said that a 40-foot canal would not drain those properties. He said that the residents are "unanimously and totally" opposed to all ten rezoning petitions. He cited environmental considerations and the fact that the development's residents will "still have to go down the same two-lane road (Sandbridge Road) to get through." He said the residents opposed anything below R-3.

The parcel for which business zoning was requested, he said, is located directly behind some single-family homes and the historic Nimmo Church. He said that since the developers say the project is 10 to 12 years down the road, they can wait to see the new comprehensive plan.

Helen W. Love of Back Bay said that the water supply in Virginia Beach is in a bind and that sufficient sewage treatment will not be available until (1982-83, 84, if then) when the New Atlantic Treatment Plant is expected to be completed.

James O. Sydnor of Lagomar said that his objection was based on the quality of life the residents want to maintain.

On questioning from Mrs. Henley, Scott said that the 3.2 units per acre density for the area projected in the General Booth Study has never been accepted by council.

Hanbury said the designs for the widening of General Booth Boulevard are under way and the road is expected to begin in 1984 or 1985.

Scott said the present roads are not adequate to handle the development. Oceana Boulevard designed for 6500 cars a day now serves 12,000 a day. Princess Anne and Sandbridge roads also are inadequate to handle the present traffic and projected traffic from areas already zoned.

Councilman Clarence A. Holland said he "can't conceive of it without False Cape Parkway." I can't conceive of the traffic getting on Sandbridge and Princess Anne Roads.

Wright said that the developers would be willing to build a road if it were needed by the project.

Hanbury said that Wright was not correct in saying that just because False Cape Parkway is on the master plan it's the responsibility of the city.

Mayor Patrick L. Standing pointed out that the people from the development would use the Sandbridge Road south to go to the beach "five or six months of the year" and not only to the north as stated by Wright.

Ervin noted that "if we don't get son with our comprehensive use plan there won't be any land to plan." He said that water and sewer are both becoming an ever-increasing problem.

He took issue with the General Booth study which set 3.2 units per acre as par for the area. "That's got to be the worst flood area in the city...Half of it is in the tidal flood plane"...It wouldn't take much development to kill Back Bay...if we continue to let developers go at the rate of 3.2."

Mrs. Henley said the city lacked water for lines and treatment for sewage. In addition, Environmental Protection Agency sanctions can result in loss of highway funds and loss of support for sewage treatment plants.

Even when the Atlantic Treatment Plant is completed and treats 36 million gallons a day, it will be operating at capacity, she said. "It doesn't seem wise to develop an entire growth corridor without a land use plan."

Payne said he agreed with the concept and long-term planning and hoped that it came up in the future. Ervin said that he considered a density of 2.6 units per acre more feasible.

The ten members present voted for denial of the petitions Councilman John A. Baum was absent.

R-3 residential district to R-6 residential district on 18.2 acres.

B-2 Community-Business District to R-6 on 11 acres.

AG-1 Agricultural District to R-6 on 34.8 acres.

AG-1 Agricultural District to R-9 Residential Townhouse District on 16.5 acres.

B-2 Community Business to R-6 on 19, 180.4 acres.

Citizenship day to honor naturalized citizens

Citizenship Day-Constitution Week Naturalization Ceremony will be held at Chrysler Hall, Norfolk, on Wednesday September 20.

The Court will convene at 2:30 p.m. with the Honorable J. Calvitt Clarke, Jr., Judge of the United States District Court, Eastern District of Virginia, presiding.

This ceremony will be open to the public but there will be no standing room.

Citizens are urged to come early and be seated prior to the opening of court.

The Norview High School Band will present a preliminary concert beginning at 1:30 p.m.

The school children of Norfolk will salute the new citizens with their music and also by acting as ushers.

The JROTC will provide the Color Guard.

Students have been invited to attend from all of the Tidewater school districts.

It has been suggested that representatives from government and civics classes could report back to the other students.

Normally a Naturalization Ceremony is held in the District Court with limited seating, so this is a rare opportunity for the public to observe such a ceremony.

i. Steven Krup, the Designated Naturalization Examiner, states that over 250 petitioners will be presented, including 25 children. The DAR feels that dramatizing the esteem in which American citizenship is held by persons not native born is a powerful reminder to those who are so fortunate.

The program following the ceremony is sponsored by the Adam Thoroughgood, Great Bridge and Sarah Constant chapters of the DAR.

The DAR has worked with applicants for American citizenship for almost 60 years.

The "DAR Manual for Citizenship" is distributed free to over 50,000 persons each year.

A main goal of the DAR is the development of better citizenship training for all persons residing in America.

SUN deadlines

News deadline for the Virginia Beach Sun is 5 p.m. Friday for the following Wednesday's edition.

Articles must be legible, preferably typewritten, double-spaced on standard sized paper.

Pictures must be sharp, clear and accompanied by complete information. (All persons in pictures must be identified.)

There is no charge for news articles or pictures.

Pictures cannot be returned unless special arrangements are made.

August moon, changes soon

It's not quite sweater weather, but the bathing suits won't hold up for too many more swims.

Parents are talking about school, but the kids aren't quite ready to go back to the schoolwork.

Every out of town friend that was passing through town on his way somewhere has already passed through.

Fur coats fill the stores, but out of the climate-controlled shops, the air is as sticky as ever.

Fresh autumn days sound inviting, but the grey chilliness of Tidewater winter looming after dampens the autumn anticipation.

The physical pleasures of summer make way for the mental atmosphere of fall.

Pre-season scrimmages just aren't strong enough to attract folks away from a few last nights at the beach.

No one wants to admit that they're glad to see summer coming to an end.

There's amazement. "It can't be true that summer's almost over."

There's anticipation. Autumn is a time of changing colors.

Students should report change in plans

Many thousands of students will be returning to the classroom this fall, and about $70,000 of these young men and women between the ages of 18 and 22, who will be resuming their studies as full-time students, have one thing in common - they all receive social security benefits.

However, not all of these students who receive "student benefits" from social security, and it is to these students, and others who may become eligible in the near future, that I would like to provide this reminder.

Social security benefits can be paid to unmarried full-time students when one of their parents receives social security retirement or disability benefits or when a parent dies after working long enough under social security. (Under certain conditions benefits can be paid on the account of a grandparent who had worked long enough under social security.)

Most of these men and women have been receiving benefits throughout their summer vacation because they planned to return to full-time school attendance this fall. But many of them, for one reason or another, may not return to school when the fall term begins.

If this happens, the ex-student should notify social security right away so that benefit checks can be stopped. If checks are not stopped quickly enough, the student may have to repay the money he or she received incorrectly.

Another group of young people, whose benefits were stopped last spring because they did not plan to continue in school, can have their benefits started again if they do return to full-time attendance while they are under 22 and unmarried.

But, benefits are not restarted automatically. The student must contact social security and re-apply.

More information about social security students' benefits can be obtained at the nearest social security office. Ask for the free booklet, "Social Security Checks for Students 18 to 22."

Skateboarding . . . "It's like always catching the perfect wave"

Josh Marlowe of Ocean City, Md., is already a professional skateboarder at the age of 14. Here he demonstrates his skill in "the bowl" at Thunderbowl Skatepark in Virginia Beach.

After racing up the side of the bowl Marlowe executes a turn to go back down.

Todd Meister of Pittsburg visits Virginia Beach every summer. Although he hasn't been skateboarding long, he knows that practice makes perfect. Here he concentrates on learning a maneuver.

Professional and amateur skateboarders gather at the top of the course to discuss techniques.

If your board goes too high up the side of "the bowl," watch out! It's a long fall down.

By PAM VANDEVEER
Virginia Beach Sun News Editor

Skateboarding. What began as the simple pastime of propelling a board with wheels down the sidewalk has since evolved into one of the most studied and challenging sports around.

Professional skateboarders are even beginning to appear on the scene. Several were in Virginia Beach last week trying out the concrete course at Thunderbowl Skatepark on Lynnhaven Parkway.

Ranging in age from 14 to 28, the pros executed a series of dazzling maneuvers in what is called "the bowl" — a huge concrete bowl where one often finds himself skating with feet above head.

It looks dangerous, and it is.

"We stress the safety aspects of skateboarding," say park owners Gayle and Fred Wall. They point out a wide selection of wrist braces, helmets, elbow and knee pads.

They add that since it is a fast growing sport, the equipment is constantly changing.

Experts argue over what type wheel is best on a board, or how many wheels should be attached to one.

With the birth of skateboard competition, the boards themselves have gotten wider. Where a 6 3/4-inch wide board used to be sufficient, the pros are now moving to 8 to 10-inch wide boards.

Competitions are becoming more and more popular. The Thunderbowl Skatepark sponsored one locally last June and will co-sponsor another at Mt. Trashmore on Sept. 16 at 11 a.m., as part of the Fifth Annual Neptune Festival.

How does it feel to go flying over a skateboard, course? One Virginia Beach skateboarder, John Parker, compares it to surfing. "It's like always having the perfect wave."

Twenty-year-old Kenny Sakurai, a professional skateboarder from Boston, Mass., demonstrates how the trick is done.

Surf's up in Virginia Beach for E.C. S. C.

The waves were good and over 150 surfers were on hand to try their luck in the East Coast Surfing Championship held at Camp Pendleton in Virginia Beach last weekend.

The Eastern Surfing Association (ESA) runs the contest annually with the Virginia Beach Jaycees under ESA regulations, according to David Ford, director of the ESA. Assistant director Ben Lane served as emcee for the two-day event.

There were three to four-foot swells at the Beach on Sunday during the final competition.

Virginia Beach Mayor Pat Standing and local Jaycee president Terry Lewis were present to award trophies to winners in eight surfing categories.

First place winners in each category were: Mini huni, Brad Beach; Boys, John Casper; Junior men's, Wes Lane; Men's, David Nuckles; Masters, Ray Shackelford; Senior, Ben Lane; Women's, Lisa Bryan; Long board, Marty Keesucker.

The Beach Bird Jaycees raffled off a 14-foot Hobie Cat during the competition. David Horne of Virginia Beach was the lucky prize winner.

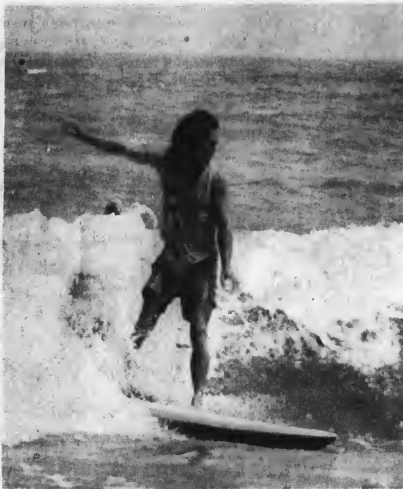

Wes Lane of Virginia Beach won the superheat event, with matched winners of the eight championship classes. Dave Nuckles of Myrtle Beach, S.C. took second place and Ray Shackelford of Virginia Beach won third.

Lisa checks out the waves prior to her surfing performance.

Later, Ms. Bryan took first place in the women's division.

Bowles tries out a 1928 Thompson machine gun inside the shooting range.

Sport of shooting intrigues Bowles

By PAM VANDEVEER
Virginia Beach Sun News Editor

Rick Bowles of Virginia Beach has always had an interest in guns and the sport of shooting. "I've been shooting hand guns since I was old enough to buy one, at age 21," he says.

Working at Atlantic & Pacific Arms Company seems only natural then to Bowles. "This is the only indoor pistol range in Virginia Beach," he explains. "Firearms owners come here because there is a lack of public land where you can go out and shoot."

"You'd be surprised at the number of women who enjoy the sport of shooting," he adds. "A lot of them are better than the men because they have more patience with it."

Bowles points out the many different types of guns displayed in the shop. "Machine guns are big collection items now," he says. "They range in price from $175 to $500. Plus there is a federal licensing tax of $200 you must pay in order to own one."

Movies in action at Beach library

Know anyone who's ever been to a kinoscope parlor? It would have been a very long time ago, because the kinoscope was one of the first inventions used to produce motion pictures.

In 1887, Thomas Edison began work on a device to make pictures appear to move. With another new invention, film that was flexible, a series of pictures could be photographed on the film and moved rapidly through a camera.

If you're interested in movies, get in motion at the Virginia Beach public library where you can read books about movies, how to make movies or read about the people who perform in them.

Dog relocates with classified

A Chesapeake dog found a comfortable new home in Massachusetts thanks to a Chesapeake POST/Virginia Beach SUN classified ad.

"The first call was from a family with five children in town to visit their older son," said Mrs. Rogers of E. Eva Blvd., in Chesapeake.

"They had just lost a dog and happened to be reading the local newspaper.

"They really had no intention of buying a dog." But they did. And the dog, the family and Mrs. Rogers are satisfied.

To get it done, call the POST/SUN classified department at 461-3430.

Jaws

Danny Ramsey of Virginia Beach won the Virginia Beach shark tournament Sunday with a 666-pound tiger shark caught from his boat, the Rambling Boy.

Second place went to Ken Hayn of Forest Hills, N.Y., for a 647-pound shark.

John Thurston of Virginia Beach captured third place with a 623-pound catch.

The Virginia Beach Fishing Center was headquarters for the one-day event.

Prior to the tournament Anthony Fentress of Virginia Beach caught the 187-pound sand tiger shark (pictured here) off False Cape.

Summer people

of Florida, Pennsylvania, New York and West Virginia. Most of us were college students representing such schools as Radford College, Randolph Macon Women's College, University of Virginia, and University of Florida.

Of course, where there are girls there are also boys. If a girl didn't already know the guy it wasn't long before she met him. Most of these guys were college students too and represented such schools as Hampden Sydney, Radford College, University of Richmond, University of Virginia and Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University (VPI-SU).

The summer jobs of these young people were just as varied as their backgrounds and ranged from waitress, waiter and cashier to valet, maid, secretary and lifeguard. Many of them held two to three jobs at a time or changed jobs just as often.

For most of the people I interviewed, the beach provided a "get-away" place and a chance to find one's self.

"It gave me a chance to prove to myself that I could be totally independent and also be with people I could enjoy being around," said Debbie Mills, a Bluefield, West Virginia native majoring in early childhood education at Radford College. "I think it taught me a lot about myself and other people."

Another Radford College student, Leslie Salvatori of McLean Virginia said, "Virginia Beach was the place where I could enjoy the beach and meet a lot of people my age. There was a constant coming and going of new faces."

"I have learned to work, to save, and to appreciate true friendship," added Salvatori. "There are a lot of people you meet and may never meet again. It makes me appreciate my friends a lot more."

Chappy Johnson of Vienna, Virginia is a senior majoring in economics and English at Randolph Macon Women's College. According to Johnson, she and her friends were looking for something different to do. They knew some girls who had lived at the beach before, and after talking it over they decided it was "the thing to do . . . A last chance to fool around and to be at the beach."

"It was a good experience," said Johnson. "I've half way grown up and I'm not so young and inexperienced anymore."

Johnson pointed out that her job as a waitress at the Lighthouse Restaurant alone was a good experience. There she was able to meet a lot of new people of different backgrounds who weren't just college students.

"It's a way to broaden your horizons," said Johnson about the beach. "There is no routine. I learned to live a little more, to be more relaxed and to be more tolerant."

"I was tied close to home," said Johnson, "but I survived. I have no qualms about taking care of myself or living by myself. I'm not so worried about next year. I know I can take care of myself."

Lifeguards Tulane Patterson and Franklin Swann, both of Lynchburg, Virginia are two year veterans of beachlife. While they jokingly said their reasons for coming were, "fun, girls, and adventure," they also spoke seriously of their two summers as an enjoyable experience.

"You learn a lot about life," said Swann, a finance and insurance major at Radford College.

According to Patterson, a recent economics graduate of Hampden Sydney, the beach has "an outdoor atmosphere which we enjoy . . . and freedom, I enjoy freedom."

Living conditions at the beach are not quite so glamorous.

"It's a holy rip-off," said Swann.

"They overcharge you and don't give you the service you need," pointed out Patterson. It's a lot of hassle."

As for their jobs, "There's a lot more work and a lot more hassle than people realize," said Swann. "The image of a lifeguard is not what it seems."

Both young men agree that you have to be in top physical condition to withstand the sun, the long hours and the seven day work week.

"You have to play beach policeman," said Swann.

The guards, Patterson said, are responsible for enforcing all city ordinances and for people in and out of the water.

"Obviously it's not all bad," said Swann, "there are some definite advantages."

Another summer resident of Virginia Beach is Mike Moorcones of Leesburg, Virginia, a marketing major at

Franklin Swann, a lifeguard for the North Beach Service, observes the beach from his stand on 39th Street.

Radford College. Although he feels the summer wasn't worthwhile financially, it was worthwhile for the experience.

The most important part of the summer, Moorcones said, is " . . . being independent . . . Not having anyone to tell you what to do and making your own decisions. Any decision you make, whether right or wrong, you learn from its outcome."

Is the beach life for anyone?

"Only if they are mature enough to handle it," said Mills.

"I recommend this for a person who is adventurous and wants to party," said Patterson. "It's not for someone who is attached."

According to Johnson, "It doesn't have to be at the beach, just anywhere. It's a good experience for anybody."

So the summer ends and the faces leave but the memories remain. Virginia Beach residents will remember that happy-go-lucky crowd of rowdy young partiers, and the summer people . . . well, they will remember Virginia Beach, an important part of their lives which they will never forget.

Good by Virginia Beach - and thanks!

"Everyman" pierces summer daze with its spiritual quest

By RHONDA MILLER
Virginia Beach Sun Staff Writer

Morality, in the summer heat of Virginia Beach, is easily buried under suntan oil, beach parties and disco music.

"Everyman" digs through the layers of summer daze and jolts one into the awareness of mortality, and such untrivial subjects as wisdom, discretion, beauty and good deeds.

Morality and mortality are not the easiest subjects for a young company to handle, but director Kathleen Lockwood shapes the New Playmakers into an enticing blend of innocence, wisdom and energy for the medieval drama.

In moving verse catches a rhythm and carries it through, Bradford Mello as "Everyman" weaves through the physical and spiritual patterns of life.

Faced by Death (George Kartis), Everyman is abandoned by Beauty, Discretion and Wisdom.

Only Good Deeds (Linda Scoote) remain, warming Everyman's spirit in the form of a lovely dance piece.

With choreography by Susan Long, good timing and enthusiasm, the New Playmakers carry "Everyman" past the trials to peaceful moment of introspection with Beauty's Song, "I'm You," a ballad written and performed by Trish Braswell.

Original music added by Fred Strong and David Russell complete a strong piece of drama.

Musical accompaniment was by Mary Jane Utley.

Director Kathleen Lockwood accepts a rose.

What do you say to your customers when you have to increase prices?

When somebody raises the price of lemons, somebody else has to pay more for lemonade.

And no matter how much you hate to see your customers' expenses go up, if you own the lemonade stand, you have to raise your prices.

It's that way with electricity. Prices for the fuels needed to generate electricity climb constantly. Add to that inflation and the rising costs of financing and constructing new power plants, and you've got the inevitable price increases.

Vepco will continue to fight for a reliable, affordable supply of electricity. And we'll continue to strive for an economical and balanced use of fuels.

Of course, that doesn't mean those unwanted increases will just go away. But it does mean they'll be kept as low as possible. And in inflationary times like these, that in itself is some encouragement.

JOIN 4-H

WE'VE SHORTENED OUR NAME TO BROADEN OUR SERVICES.

You've known us for years as First Federal Savings & Loan Association. And, hopefully, we've had the pleasure of helping you with your savings or home loan plans at one of our four offices throughout Tidewater.

But there's a big change we'd like you to know about.

Technically speaking, we've changed from a "mutual" association to a "stock" association. And our new name is simply First Savings.

What all this means is: our neighbors throughout Tidewater now have the opportunity to share in the profits of our association.

Also, we will be able to offer a great deal more mortgage money than in the past. This means we can help in the continuing growth of our community—both for families and business.

Of course, we still offer all the things you've come to expect from us. We pay the highest interest allowed by law on the full range of savings plans; including the new 8 year, 8% savings certificate and 1/4% over the 6 month Treasury Bill rate. And all savings are insured up to $40,000.

Our Prestige Freedom Account can get you emergency cash, anywhere in the country, at over 3300 participating savings & loan associations. Plus automatic funds transfer and mortgage payments, free notary service, and free traveler's cheques or money orders.

So look for the sign of the eagle. You'll find a shorter name, but all the services we've always offered, and more.

At First Savings. We work for you.
